Carter, Ford plan first face-to-face transition meeting

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — Jimmy Carter and President Ford will meet at the White House Monday or Tuesday, their first face-to-face meeting since Carter won the race for the White House, it was announced today.

The exact time and date have not yet been set, Carter's office said in a brief announcement.

The meeting was arranged when the president-elect called Ford Monday night. Ford returned the call later that night and the two arranged to meet during a planned visit to Washington by Carter, the announcement said.

Carter, stepping up his transition process, also will meet here with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger Saturday and will confer several times this week with Vice President-elect Walter Mondale.

The former Georgia governor said Monday he is sifting through his campaign promises to get cost estimates and arrange them by priority.

Carter also said Monday that under his administration the White House staff would not dictate to the rest of the executive branch. He did not mention names, but it was clear he had the Nixon White House in mind.

"I don't see my White House staff trying to administer the affairs of any major federal department," Carter said at his second news conference since his election.

Carter said the director of the National Security Council, filled during much of the Nixon admnistration by Henry Kissinger, would serve in a staff capacity only.

"I would look to the secretary of state to represent both me and the nation in foreign affairs decisions, and be a spokesman for our country in foreign affairs," Carter said.

"We are now in the process of assessing the promises that I have made to the American people, trying to arrange them in an order of sequence or priority, getting cost estimates on them year by year, correlating them with the possible amendments to the budget Mr. Ford will recommend to Congress," Carter said.

Carter also announced a busy calendar for the next few days. It includes:

Tonight — Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale arrives for discussions.

Wednesday — a meeting with Democratic congressional leaders at the Georgia home of Sen. Herman E. Talmadge.

Friday — a CIA briefing for Carter and Mondale.

Monday and Tuesday — a trip to Washington to meet with Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and members of President Ford's cabinet.

Before the end of November — a meeting with Ford.

At unspecified times soon — a meeting with Kissinger, and a meeting with business leaders arranged by Paul Austin, chairman of Coca-Cola.

Carter made his first formal appointment — that of Press Secretary Jody Powell — and said he will use the same "careful, thorough and deliberate process" in choosing other officials of his administration as he did in selecting Mondale to be his running mate.

Carter said he was seeking recommendations "from all interested citizens" for his admministration. He said he already has a list of 6,000 to 7,000 names now being computerized.

He and Mondale will consult with "distinguished Americans," congressional leaders as well as business and labor leaders, Carter said.

He said he personally would interview the selections for the major posts and personally would select the top 75 of the more than 1,000 positions to be filled. The entire process will be conducted by his long-time top aide, Hamilton Jordan, in Washington.

"I have not made a decision up until this point about any of these appointees," Carter said. "I think that this process ought to be a very slow and very careful and very methodical one."

A PETTING FARM sponsored by the Lompoc Chapter of the Future Farmers of America will be part of the Family-A-Fair scheduled this Saturday at 3346 Constellation Road in Vandenberg Village, sponsored by United Church Learning Center. Here, Natalie Whitcomb and Brandon Rearick get acquainted with some of the animals that will be brought to the event by FFA members Valerie Hamilton and Jean Fisher. Other features of the event will be a bake sale and Christmas bazaar. The public is invited.

Syrians ready move to north and south

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The Arab League peacekeeping force today readied its troops to move north to Tripoli and south to Sidon to consolidate its control of Lebanon further by reopening the major north-south roads.

The Syrian-dominated peace force moved into Beirut Monday with virtually no opposition, bringing silence to the guns that have blasted the ravaged capital for 19 months.

The independent newspaper An Nahar said the predawn operation Monday involved the deployment of about 11,000 men in and around the city.

Beirut residents today awoke from the quietest night they had enjoyed in 581 days, following the peaceful sweep through the city that banished rival gunmen from their battle sites.

Even though most Christian rightist and Moslem leftist fighters kept their weapons, putting them out of sight at their respective headquarters, the presence of the Arab army led to the immediate cessation of fighting in Beirut.

"Most of us couldn't sleep last night," joked one west Beirut resident. "We had gotten used to the noise."

On its first full day of occupation in the war-ravaged capital, the Arab force will consolidate its positions, especially in the scenes of the heaviest fighting along the confrontation lines between east and west Beirut. It also was expected that the airport south of the city would open soon.

Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat presided over a three-hour meeting of the Palestinian guerrilla leadership Monday night to review the entry of Arab peacekeeping troops into Beirut, Palestinian sources said today.

As the Arab peace force of some 6,000 men marched through the city, bystanders applauded the advancing column and decorated their tanks and artillery with flowers.

No invasion intentions, Brezhnev assures Tito

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Tito held their second round of talks today against a backdrop of assurances by Brezhnev that the Soviet Union has no intention of attacking Yugoslavia.

But the two Communist leaders cut their session short by 45 minutes and Brezhnev went to nearby Friendship Park to plant a "Tree of Peace" in a 10-minute ceremony witnessed only by a Russian television crew.

No explanation was given for the truncated round of talks, which was to have lasted two hours. Brezhnev departed before schedule from the planting site and reporters missed the ceremony.

A third session between Tito and Brezhnev was scheduled for the evening. A joint communique was being prepared for release on Brezhnev's departure for Moscow Wednesday.

Tito, 84, and Brezhnev, 69, went by motorcade through the center of this drab but bustling capital on the Danube River. At least 60,000 persons, most of them children let out of school for the day, lined the route from Tito's suburban residence to the Federal Executive council building, a low, modern white stone structure in New Belgrade.

Supervisor-elect Hedlund honing ax for welfare, parks changes

By VAUGHN PROCTOR
Staff writer

Bob Hedlund plans no immediate fullscale replacement of appointees on some 60 county committees when he takes his seat on the Board of Supervisors Jan. 3, but he is sharpening his ax for some changes in welfare administration and the Parks and Recreation Department.

Hedlund outlined his plans in a frank review of the election and the transition between the tenure of 12-year veteran Francis H. Beattie, and his own new career.

Hedlund said Beattie had extended a hand of friendship because he had a rough time himself when he took over from the outgoing supervisor in 1965.

Hedlund has met the holdover supervisors and most of the key county staffers, and in his own words, "I look forward to a very cooperative working relationship with other members of the board and with the county officials."

Although Hedlund is completely occupied with plans for his coming to power, he still stings from some of the campaign battles. He winces when he recalls that he was tagged the "Isla Vista Posey Picker."

That tag probably came about because of the growth-no growth syndrome, Hedlund believes. "There must be continued growth," he said, "but citizens should be concerned with the direction that growth takes and the parameters that the growth takes. Rampant growth is just as unhealthy as no growth. Its negative aspect outweighs any positive aspects."

Hedlund and the other two new supervisors will be given a briefing or an orientation by county officials sometime next month, according to Jeff Sansom, assistant county administrative officer. Sansom says a "nuts and bolts program will outline budgeting procedures, personnel matters, commission appointments, civil service obligations, board meeting rules and the agenda process."

Top priority when the new board is seated will be appointments to the planning commission. Hedlund says he will select his own fourth district appointees in the same manner that he will select members of other county bodies: by the advertising and interview method.

SUPERVISOR-ELECT HEDLUND

He bristles when he thinks of some of the criticism that has been leveled at him. He talks about "reaching out into the community to stimulate greater participation on the part of the citizenry in county government." "It's a very healthy situation for county government to bring in a broad spectrum of citizens representing various socio-economic areas so that the whole community is being heard," he said.

Attention is focusing on three major committees, whose members serve at the pleasure of the supervisors. All three are sensitive. Hedlund says he will fill vacancies on the Lompoc Advisory Committee for the General Plan, the Upper Santa Ynez Valley Advisory Committee for The General Plan and the county advisory committee on water, by advertising and interviewing prospective candidates. However, he is emphatic about not wanting to sweep all present members out of office. Speaking of the water committee, he said, "I have a feeling it is tremendously sensitive. I do not want to disturb the continuity. I would not make any changes now ... It would be an error to make a change and disturb the continuity at this time.

"Throughout the campaign, and I still maintain it," Hedlund said, "each committee appointment will go through the advertising process — even to the planning commission: its function will be advertised and citizens will be asked to send in resumes so that we'll have a backlog of available people."

Tomorrow in a final segment, Hedlund announces more of his plans and sounds off against the welfare program and the county parks and recreation department.

Conjunctive river use report due

A progress report on the controversial conjunctive use study will be aired Thursday at 7:30 p.m. during a meeting of the Santa Ynez River Water Conservation District Board of Directors.

The meeting is scheduled for the district office at 3622 Sagunto St., Santa Ynez.

County Water Agency engineers have been compiling statistics on the conjunctive use study in a program urged by the state and mandated by the Board of Supervisors. Under the program the yield of Cachuma and the underground supply in the south coast are used in combination to see if greater over all yield can be obtained.

In other action the directors will consider a study report on Gibralter Reservoir; a report on downstream water releases; and a public hearing on an Environmental Impact Report on Project 23960.

Brown gets interim judge appointment

Frederick S. (Rick) Brown, attorney, of Los Olivos, was appointed Monday by the Board of Supervisors to serve as interim judge of the Solvang Justice Court to serve out the unexpired term of former Justice Court Judge Royce Lewellen, now a Superior Court judge.

Brown, who was elected in November to serve a full term as judge of the court starting Jan. 1, 1977, will serve as interim judge until that date.

The county supervisors had sought applicants for the interim post, and Supervisor Francis H. Beattie told the board that its job to appoint an interim judge "is easy...because Rick Brown is the only applicant."

Bingo ordinance on city council agenda

An ordinance adding a chapter to the Lompoc City Code legalizing Bingo in the city under certain conditions is scheduled to be introduced at tonight's meeting of the City Council.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in council chambers at City Hall, 119 W. Walnut Ave.

The chapter amends Article II of the City Code. It defines Bingo, requires that organizations eligible to conduct Bingo games secure a license to do so, outlines licensing provisions and details conditions under which a license may be suspended.

The ordinance limits prizes in any Bingo game to $250 in value, cash or otherwise; requires separate accounting for funds derived through Bingo games; requires that games be open to the public and not just to members of the licensed organization; establishes occupancy limits of the premises where games are conducted; sets 18 or older as age requirements for participants; establishes a six-hour limit in each 24-hour period for games and forbids Bingo before 10 a.m. or after 2 a.m. and requires that a person be physically present in order to participate in a game.

Also on tonight's agenda is a proposal to proceed with the purchase option on the Knights of Pythias lodge hall for a Senior Citizen Center.

The council also will give consideration to a proposed ordinance requiring the prewiring of all new construction for cable television outlets.

Further suggestions will be entertained by the council tonight on how to utilize $368,000 in Community Development Block Grant funds.

Condemned killer, fiancee in apparent suicide pact

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Condemned killer Gary Gilmore and his fiancee Nicole Barrett were found unconscious today of drug overdoses, apparently after trying to carry out a "suicide pact."

A hospital spokesman said Gilmore was in serious condition from an overdose of seconal but "he's going to live." The girl, who took seconal and Dalmane, was in worse shape — listed as critical and unconscious.

Gilmore, 35, who wanted to die Monday before a firing squad, was found in his cell at Utah State Prison "not breathing properly." He was given resuscitation and rushed to a Salt Lake City hospital by paramedics.

"We suspect a possible drug overdose," said Warden Sam Smith, who said Gilmore was still breathing when put in the ambulance for the 25-mile drive to University of Utah Medical Center.

He was admitted to the hospital in serious condition from an overdose of seconal. "He's going to live," a hospital spokesman said.

At about the same time Miss Barrett, 20, was discovered by a neighbor at her apartment in Springville, about 30 miles south of the prison, with two empty sleeping pill vials beside her. She was taken by ambulance to a Provo hospital, were she was in critical condition.

Rumors about a suicide pact between the couple have circulated in Utah for two weeks, but both Gilmore — speaking through his attorney — and Miss Barrett had denied them.

Michael Esplin, one of two defense lawyers fired by Gilmore when the admitted killer decided to ask for immediate imposition of the death penalty, said that he had not been told of a suicide pact but he and his colleague, Craig Snyder, suspected there was one.

"We felt he had suicidal tendencies," Esplin said. "He was using the execution date as putting the state in a position of carrying out his suicide."

The lawyer said they suspected a suicide pact because in all the agreements by Gilmore to sell his life story, there is no mention of Miss Barrett getting any of the proceeds.

"They had such a strong relationship," he said. "It was strange. It was almost as if she wasn't going to be around."

In September, he said, Miss Barrett slashed her arm while visiting Gilmore in Utah County Jail.

Gilmore had been scheduled to go before the Utah Board of Pardons Wednesday to renew his plea to be shot by a firing squad at the prison for the slaying last summer of a Provo motel clerk.

Warden Smith said a guard found Gilmore in his cell, "not breathing properly," and called for medical help. Paramedics gave him resuscitation, then took him to the hospital 25 miles away.

In Springville, Police Chief Leland Bowers said Miss Barrett was found in her apartment by a neighbor at 8:50 a.m.

"She was unconscious, but breathing," he said.

Ford to weigh future carefully

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford, resuming work after a California vacation, let it be known today he will do "a lot of looking and listening" before making any definite decisions on his life as a private citizen.

Ford's intention to go slow in charting his personal future was relayed by his press secretary, Ron Nessen, who said he talked to Ford about it this morning.

In the meantime, Nessen told reporters, Ford is determined to meet his "prime responsibility" for running the nation until he leaves office Jan. 20.

Nessen declined to outline any of the options Ford might be considering in mulling over his future.

"The President has made no firm decisions on his future plans, either in terms of where he will live or what he will do," said Nessen. "He is going to do what he describes as a lot of looking and listening. When he has made his decisions, they will be announced.

"He doesn't feel that there's any hurry. He's not rushing to make these decisions. He believes that he has a prime responsibility between now and January 20th to be the President of the United States and that's the way he will function.

"He is relaxed and rested and ready to complete the duties of his presidency," Nessen told reporters Monday aboard Air Force One as Ford flew to Washington after eight days of golf in Palm Springs, Calif.

Weather

Warm sunny days and clear cool nights through Wednesday. Local north easterly winds 15 to 30 m.p.h. at times tonight. Highs from near 80 at the beaches to near 90 inland. Lows tonight 47 to 55.

Wednesday tides

High tides of 5.3 feet at 6:17 a.m. and 4.1 feet at 6:45 p.m. Low tide of 0.8 feet at 12:58 p.m.

Glimpses

"Mash" notes several years old to a person now on the City Council being found hand-written in the margins of several books at Lompoc Public Library.

A HAPPY combination of diligent parishioners and the generosity of members of the Robert R. Young Iris Society, culminated in a new display garden at United Methodist Church. Society president Rosalie McVicar is flanked by Jack Jones, left, chairman of the church's board of trustees, and Victor Phelps, a church member, who parlayed his membership in the iris society into donations of iris. At McVicar's feet is a commemorative routed redwood sign created by church member, Clarence Jones, who was not able to be present. Other principals responsible for the huge planting at North Avenue and G Street are Jennie Dutra, church secretary; Murray Gibbons, pastor; and from the society in addition to McVicar, Nell Johnson, Gordon deMarrais, Jeanne Reed and Dorothy Godbey

10-member County Planning Commission due in January

The County Planning Commission is apparently destined to go from nine to 10 members in January, 1977, according to information passed on to the Board of Supervisors Monday.

The three supervisors-elect have "been polled and each says he wants to appoint two members," Supervisor Robert E. Kallman reported. Thus, the majority on the five-member board is expected Jan. 3 at the board reorganization session to approve the expansion.

One of the two holdover members, Kallman sought to introduce an ordinance Monday which would provide for a 10-member commission. But objections by Supervisor James M. Slater — based on the fact the proposal was an added agenda item — finally led to the board continuing the Kallman proposal to Nov. 22. Adoption of the ordinance on Nov. 29 would allow for a 30-day period for its enactment in time for the Jan. 3 reorganization session.

But a 10-member commission — which has the backing of Supervisors-elect Robert Hedlund, Lompoc; Dr. William Wallace, Isla Vista, and David Yager, Montecito — will cost the county $21,524 for the second half of the current fiscal year, according to Planning Director Britt Johnson.

Johnson estimated that the added cost includes an estimated $6,500 for modification of the commission hearing room, which is equipped now to handle a maximum of nine commissioners.

The current appropriation of $19,138 provides for a nine-member commission only to the end of this year, and five members for the first half of 1977, through June 30. It was set up at budget time in June when it was felt five members would be sufficient.

The $15,024 figure for 10 commissioners for six months is based on total compensation of $500 per meeting, $101 mileage per meeting, and $25 lunch per meeting, for 24 weekly sessions.

Supervisor Kallman has been the only board member with a single appointment to the commission, which has often voted 5-4 favoring the environment. A 10-member commission could be deadlocked on important issues, it has been pointed out, but since the commission is only advisory on most matters, the county supervisors' vote is the crucial vote in land use matters.

Kallman said he was not asking that the county appropriate the extra funding — in accord with Johnson's report — in his motion for 10 commissioners.

Cost nixes study on growth impact

The Board of Supervisors doesn't seem likely to be approving any ambitious studies as to how growth or restricted growth impacts economic, social and environmental aspects of Santa Barbara County, if projected costs of such studies turn out to be accurate.

Planning Director Britt Johnson told the supervisors Monday that a department specialist has estimated a detailed study of this kind might cost about $250,000 or more.

On Monday, the board which has received requests for such studies before — one came from the Goleta School District trustees recently — was asked by both the City of Santa Maria and Summerland County Water District to support such studies.

Despite the high estimated cost given by Planning Department research analyst Clifford Pauley, the board went ahead on a motion by Supervisor Harrell Fletcher to refer the requests to the Planning Department and Office of Environmental Quality for a report as to feasibility of such a study.

Board chairman Frank J. Frost said he felt the requests were coming from persons who seem to "fail to realize these economic studies are enormously difficult and costly to prepare." Frost had advised the board to get the feasibility report from the county planners and environmental office if they wanted to take another look.

Animal compound may leave county

The possibility that the Pat Derby Enterprises, Inc. will move its compound of exotic and other animals from the county completely was outlined Monday before the Board of Supervisors.

Supervisors were told that Joe M. Agapay Jr., legal counsel for Mrs. Derby, had met recently with persons who might provide a location outside the county, and has the feeling that it is "the most likely plan to be effecuated."

At present, the Derby animals — including a number of star performers on nationally shown tv commercials — are housed on a ranch on Santa Rosa Road, west of Buellton.

Area residents have complained the storage of the animals near Buellton has violated provisions of the county ordinance, and Mrs. Derby earlier had considered moving the animals to another location in the Santa Ynez Valley, where she resides.

The supervisors — after hearing a report that Mrs. Derby is hoping to move the animals outside the county — decided to continue the matter to Nov. 22, in hopes of getting more definite word at that time.

Marriages

Marriage licenses were issued in Lompoc to Karl Jorgen Shaver, 26, and Lucinda Rose Wilkerson, 22, both of Lompoc; and to Jasper Valentine Totten, 34, and Patricia Lynn Webster, 27, both of Lompoc; and to John Charles Peto, 54, and Constance Marian Leary, 43, both of Lompoc.

And to Ronald William Albright, 19, and Dianne deJesus Arruda, 18, both of Lompoc; and to Joseph Anthony Dazzo Jr., 25, and Patricia Ann Johantgen, 27, both of Lompoc; and to Timothy Rolland Ott, 21, and Shelly Adrian Scoggins, 19, both of Lompoc; and to Doughlas Kent Simpson, 18, and Deborah Arlene Freeman, 20, both of Lompoc.

Board action cuts north county road fund share

There have been times in past years — before limited growth set in — where county supervisors have fought bitterly on behalf of road funds for their districts.

But a new trend has set in — and on Monday Second District Supervisor Robert E. Kallman expressed pleasure that his board cohorts from the First and Third Districts had agreed to allocate their share of a new $141,472 "bonanza" to help Kallman's district fund a much needed improvement of Veronica Springs Road between Santa Barbara and Goleta.

North County supervisors Harrell Fletcher and Francis H. Beattie were not so gratified. They pointed out this arrangement — which passed 3-2 with the three South Coast supervisors in support — has meant their districts now will receive only $25,295 of the windfall, rather than $31,556 under a program earlier proposed by Transportation Director Leland Steward.

The Kallman proposal had some $15,000 taken off the top to provide funding for the Santa Ynez Valley transportation project for senior citizens, with $25,295 given to each of the five districts.

Supervisors Kallman and Frost gave up their district allotments to help Kallman's district fund what Kallman said was a highly needed project to alleviate dangerous traffic conditions. The Second District "doesn't have many roads but those we have are heavily traveled," Kallman said, and thus seemed to need more funds than the allotment to it.

Board confirms appointments

Santa Barbara attorney Ronald Stevens was appointed Monday by the Board of Supervisors to fill a vacancy on the County Property Assessment Appeals Board.

Stevens was named to succeed Osborn Brazelton, another Santa Barbara attorney, who has resigned due to pressure of private business. Brazelton served as board chairman.

The board also confirmed appointment of Charles Wagner as the new county public works director to succeed Norman Caldwell, who will retire late next month after a 33-year county career.

Helen's guest

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — When singer Helen Reddy and her husband, Jeff Wald, decided to repeat their marriage vows to mark their 10th anniversary, they invited only married couples as guests, except for Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Brown, a close friend, read the vows Miss Reddy wrote for herself and Wald and "was quite moved about it," Wald said. "For a bachelor he was surprised that he was as moved about marriage ..."

Brown did not stay long after the ceremony. "You know, he's not exactly a partygoer," Wald said.

Santa Barbaran medical society president-elect

Santa Barbara physican, Dr. Leonard A. Price has been chosen president-elect of the Medical Society of Santa Barbara County, and was also named one of the society's delegates to the California Medical Association.

Other members of the county society's board of directors, are Dr. Melvin Casberg; Dr. Barry Coughlin of Lompoc; Dr. Jay Keystone; and Dr. Gilbert White.

Price will serve with the society's 1977 president, Dr. Bruce Howard of Santa Maria.

Howard will join Price as a delegate to the state body. Alternate C.M.A. delegates are Dr. William Gausman of Lompoc; and Dr. Robert Hartzman.

New society officers will begin terms of office on Jan. 1, 1977. Price will be president in 1978.

'Everybody' fails to click

By STAN TULLEDO
Staff writer

The familiar situation of an unwilling and undertalented child being dragged from studio to studio by a starry-eyed mother is seen at a different point in time in "Everybody Has to Be Somebody" which opened last week at the Lompoc Civic Auditorium.

In this Lompoc Civic Theater production, it is years later and the once young actress is grown up with a child of her own. Her biggest embarrassment is when someone mentions they saw one of her old movies on the late show — one of her old movies being "Son of Monster Man," not the kind of stuff she would like to boast about.

The play takes place in the home of Mrs. McFadden — the former movie actress. It would be a peaceful home if her mother, who lives in, would accept the fact that her daughter has quit show business for good.

The mother, however, is still starry-eyed.

The plot of "Everybody," then, is that of the mother trying to get her daughter back into acting.

During the two-act play, there is a lot of chit-chat, so much so that about the middle of the show this reviewer thought something startling was going to happen because nothing else had happened. Maybe "Everybody" was really a thriller with a long lead in.

But the play is billed as a great comedy "you don't want to miss."

What happened? Why didn't this production work? Was it a timing problem, not picking up of cues? The play didn't click.

Walking into the theater, it seems so unlikely that anything would go amiss. Marian Stave directed the play and she has directed some of LCT's best shows.

The cast was very likeable and did some good work. Dawn Black-Fox was strong as the mother.

The three boys — John Burri, John Mickadeit and Mark Torres — did well by staying in character.

The other cast members were Joan Pitts, Roy Durso and Betty Todd, all having admirable qualities.

Maybe "Everybody" is one of those plays that reads well, but doesn't play so hot.

It plays again November 18, 19 and 20. Curtain is 8 p.m.

$70,000 park restroom stirs debate among supervisors

Cost estimates of carrying out a master plan of development for Toro Canyon County Park in Carpinteria Valley — now down to below half of the earlier proposed $300,000 figure — contained one item that virtually had county supervisors leaping from their chairs Monday.

That item set out a possible cost of $70,000 for a single new restroom facility for the foothills park northwest of Carpinteria.

"What, $70,000 for a restroom!" exclaimed Supervisor Harrell Fletcher. He said "everything else seemed in line except this."

Board chairman Frank J. Frost, supervisor of the First District in which the park is located, also said he felt compelled to question the figure.

Park Director Michael Pahos then went into a recital of restroom economics.

"The most expensive room in a new house today is the bathroom," he said. There is only one in the park now, he declared, and the need for a second one will soon be acute as more park visitors are checked in each year.

Pahos declared there were alternatives to restrooms such as he proposed, and they were often a mistake.

One such mistake appeared to have been made in Jalama County Beach Park, in Supervisor Francis Beattie's district.

"I hope you never put in another restroom like the one you did at Jalama," remarked Beattie. "No sir, we'll never put in one like that again," Pahos replied.

One supervisor remarked privately that the county might well build a home in the park for $70,000 and include a couple of toilets in it — and thus be ahead.

Pahos finally agreed with Frost to slash the $70,000 restroom cost estimate down to $50,000.

This brought a reduction of the total figure from $153,878 to $133,878.

Frost earlier had told Pahos to come back with a plan that would drastically cut down expense foreseen for an equestrian facility. Pahos did that, and the total cost figure came down dramatically.

Equestrian area costs were visualized at $30,100, including a corral, hitching area with water, parking for cars bringing in horse vans and grading.

Group picnic costs were cited at $53,778, including a picnic area for 150 users, parking, play area, grading and lawn.

Pahos said full development of the park was not possible until the access road was improved and water brought into the park from the water district line.

PETER KLOTZ, is one of three speakers from the Resource Center for Nonviolence in Santa Cruz who will be featured Wednesday night at the Democratic Club meeting. To be held in room A-4 of the Lompoc Center of Allan Hancock College (Miguelito School), the meeting will start at 7:30. Scott Kennedy and Diane Thomas also will speak.

Daily record

TRUSTEES of Allan Hancock Community College tonight will consider the following: Two minor change orders for the college's new library; a report on mini-term courses; a report on bilingual teacher corps program; a report on the law enforcement training program; a proposal for adoption of regulations for a trustee election on March 8. The seats of two trustees are up for election: Area 3, Cuyama and Los Alamos, presently held by Hubbard S. Russell Jr.; and Area 5, Santa Ynez Valley, presently held by John B. Carricaburu. The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on the Santa Maria campus.

AN AM-FM tuner and auxiliary components valued at $1,600 have been reported stolen in the burglary of Thomas Hardeman's home at 504-D North T St., police say.

POLICE today were investigating the theft of radios and damage to several mobile homes at Sunset Chevrolet, 1300 North H St. Burglars broke into three mobile homes owned by Sunset, and stole one radio. Value of the radio and the damage was estimated at $400. A similar loss was reported from a mobile home owned by Herman Marine of Paso Robles.

TWO SHOTGUNS valued at $250 have been reported stolen in the burglary of a pickup truck owned by Jo Lynn Turri at 436 N. First St., police say. One of the firearms was 12 gauge, the other .410 gauge.

A TAPE DECK player and a quantity of tape cartridges valued at $300 have been reported stolen from a van type truck of John E. Ochoa at 1613 E. Pine Ave., police say.

BUD Baker, 34, of Morro Bay, has been held to answer the charge of murder in the shooting death last Oct. 4 of Jeffrey H. Brandon, 20, of Lompoc. Baker is scheduled to be arraigned on Nov. 29 in Santa Barbara Superior Court. Court appointed attorney John Sink is representing the man. Baker was arrested on Oct. 8 in the Monterey Peninsula area. Brandon was an employe of Wells Fargo Guard Service and was assigned to Stearns Wharf in Santa Barbara. He was killed by a slug from his own service weapon, which was apparently wrestled from his control by an assailant.

ONE man was fatally injured Monday and 11 others suffered minor injuries when a Southern Pacific Railroad utility truck slid down a 25-foot high embankment on Cuesta Grade in San Luis Obispo County. The truck rolled over and came to rest on its top, according to California Highway Patrol. Dead was Eusevio Gonzales, in his late 40s or early 50s. Gonzales died of his injuries in French Hospital, San Luis Obispo.

STEREO sound reproduction components and other personal property valued at $407 have been reported stolen in the burglary of Annita D. Blakkolb's home at 215 E. Walnut Ave., police say.

A BUELLTON woman, Alice Sheridan, 20, of 330 W. Highway 246, was seriously injured Monday night, when the car she was driving was hit headon by a wrong way car, being driven by Herbert Robb Jr., of Long Beach according to the California Highway Patrol. Sheridan was listed in satisfactory condition in Goleta Valley Hospital today with major internal injuries, according to authorities. Robb suffered minor injuries and was jailed on suspicion of driving while under the influence of alcohol and felony drunken driving.

EUGENE Crum, 59, of 6441 Highway 246, Buellton, suffered a possible head injury Monday night when his car struck and killed a horse on Highway 246, a half mile east of Purisima Road, according to the California Highway Patrol. The owner of the horse was not immediately identified. Crum was admitted to Lompoc Hospital for observation.

ON WEDNESDAY at 7:30 p.m. in the Lompoc Library, the Lompoc Mental Health Association will present a panel discussion on "The Holiday Paradox" (The Christmas Blues). The panelists will be Joe Brown, Ph.D., Mal Anderson, clinical social worker and counselor for County Mental Health Services; Margaret Hibbits, school psychologist and Stuart Fitch, rector of Saint Mary's Episcopal Church. The public is invited.

LET'S HOPE those cars preceding and following the Shuttle Orbiter Vehicle 101 have signs that read "Wide Load Ahead" when it is actually trucked a distance of 31 miles from Palmdale to Edwards AFB for testing. This artist's concept shows how the nation's first reusable space transportation craft will take up both sides of the highway — and then some — on its way to the Dryden Flight Research Center at Edwards. Shuttle Orbiter flights are scheduled to begin in the early 1980s at Kennedy Space Center in Florida and later at Vandenberg Air Force Base.

U.S. vetoes membership in United Nations for Vietnam

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States, in vetoing U.N. membership for Vietnam Monday night, told Hanoi that relations between the two countries could be normalized quickly if Vietnam will account for 800 Americans missing in the Indochina war.

Vietnam said the demand for such information "could not be met."

The vote was 14-1 in favor of membership for Vietnam, but the single veto was enough to kill the resolution.

It was the 18th U.S. veto in the Security Council since the world body was formed.

Washington has maintained steadily that Vietnam must account for the missing American servicemen before the United States will agree to its U.N. admisson.

U.S. and Vietnamese diplomats met in Paris Friday to discuss the issue of improved relations.

U.S. Ambassador William Scranton told the Council the United States did not doubt Vietnam's ability to meet the obligations of the U.N. Charter but questioned its willingness to do so.

"It has failed, despite the information available to it, to account satisfactorily for Americans missing in action and to return the remains of those killed in the recent conflict in Indochina, despite repeated efforts by the United States to persuade them (sic) to do so," Scranton said.

"I appeal to the current applicant to give attention to the human rights provisions of the Charter, to abandon trading on the sorrow of families to attain its ends. Normalization of relations could then flow swiftly."

Ambassador Dinh Ba Thi, Vietnam's U.N. observer, said the Hanoi government also seeks information on MIAs — both American and Vietnamese.

"There are tens of thousands of Vietnamese who are surely suffering because of missing servicemen two years after the war," he told the Council. "Hundreds more have been killed by the mines left behind by the aggressor.

"There is a maneuver, cunningly pursued by Messrs. Ford and Kissinger, demanding to be given a complete list of those missing in action—a demand that could not be met and which does nothing but obstruct normalization of relations."

The membership resolution was sponsored by 11 Council members, including the Soviet Union, China and France.

Stalemate over timetable forces early adjournment of Geneva talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Black nationalist leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo today rejected a British compromise timetable for black majority rule in Rhodesia, forcing early adjournment of the Geneva peace talks.

Mugabe and Nkomo, partners in a "Patriotic Front," also said Britain's failure to set a binding date for independence meant it had "no intention to transfer power to the true representatives of the people."

Ivor Richard, the British conference chairman, adjourned the talks after the "Patriotic Front" statement was presented and did not set a time for another meeting.

Richard said afterward there was "no question of anybody leaving" Geneva, but declined to give a firm reply to a question on whether the conference could continue without Mugabe and Nkomo, calling it "academic and hypothetical."

Rhodesian foreign Minister Pieter van der Byl, leaving the meeting, said Mugabe and Nkomo had made "all sorts of unreasonable and unfounded allegations against the chairman."

"Frankly I don't know where we stand now," he said.

Asked if he thought the conference could continue without Mugabe and Nkomo, van der Byl replied, "I wouldn't want to be over-optimistic."

British officials also said they had "no idea at all" what would now happen.

Richard Monday presented the conference with a compromise formula that would give Rhodesia majority rule independence under the name of Zimbabwe on Dec. 1, 1977, if the necessary legal and constitutional process could be completed by that time.

Richard said Britain believes the process will take 15 months, in which case independence would be on March 1, 1978.

He did not, however, make either date binding.

The compromise was accepted by the two other nationalist leaders, Bishop Abel Muzorewa and Ndabaningi Sithole, and by the minority white government delegation in Monday's 20-minute session.

Mugabe and Nkomo charged at today's 12-minute session that Britain was using "tactics aimed at accentuating divisions among African nationalist delegations and at negotiating over our heads the future of our country and the destiny of our peoples."

They said Richard's compromise was "imprecise and evasive" and ignored evidence that the independence process could be completed in nine months or in one year at most.

"There is a justifiable fear of attempts by reactionary forces to seize power again illegally if no specific date is fixed," they said.

Nkomo and Mugabe also charged that Richard had withheld information from some delegations since informal talks began Oct. 21. A British spokesman denied the charge.

NATO nations run by Reds will get no U.S. secrets

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (UPI) — The United States cannot share military secrets with European governments that have communists in their cabinets, Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., told the North Atlantic Assembly Monday.

Javits, head of the U.S. delegation to the 22nd annual Assembly meeting, also warned the U.S. could be "dragged into a depression" if the British, Italian or French economies collapsed.

He also accused Arab oil producing nations of "bankrupting developing countries" and said an oil price increase by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would "have a deleterious impact" on industrialized nations.

Asked what impact inclusion of communists in the Italian or French government would have on NATO, Javits said in an interview: "I believe public opinion in our country and congressional opinion would be against sharing military secrets."

He said he doubted it would "stop economic cooperation or any other kind of relationship, but I do think it will directly affect the military."

Saying "we have no right to interfere" in the organization of a government, Javits said that, "every country should know ... that our country will not be able to be in a military alliance with a country a significant element of whose cabinet is communist."

The Assembly is the interparliamentary arm of NATO, providing a forum for member nations to discuss top political issues. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was to address the group late today, his first public appearance since the presidential elections.

NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns told the Assembly Monday the Soviet Union has expanded its military forces beyond its needs, and urged West European nations to match increased Soviet defense spending to check the threat.

"The shadow cast by the Soviets in Angola has not been dispelled," Luns said. "Soviet intervention in Angola ... struck a note of warning, and its echoes will not quickly fade away."

Luns criticized the "continued expansion of Soviet military forces well beyond their needs." But also criticizing European governments, Luns said "It will not be possible for NATO even to maintain its capabilities unless it gets more defense spending."

Earlier Monday, Admiral I. C. Kidd, Supreme Commander of NATO forces, Atlantic, said European allies must modernize their navies if NATO is to "cope with the Soviet maritime threat."

26 facing Medicaid charges

NEW YORK (UPI) — Twenty-six nursing home officials, food and services vendors face charges today of participating in a $4 million Medicaid kickback scheme that may involve half the nursing homes in the New York metropolitan area.

"The number of homes involved in the arrangement ... could approach 50 per cent (125) of the nursing homes in the metropolitan area," Charles Hynes, special prosecutor for nursing homes, said Monday.

Thirteen nursing home owners and employes, 11 vendors and two meat company owners were named in the indictments. They were charged with perjury, conspiracy, violation of health laws and bribing a witness.

The system "netted $500 per vendor per month per nursing home, totaling $4 million over a year's time. And that is a very conservative figure," said Hynes, who was named special prosecutor last year following revelations of widespread abuse within the industry.

The kickback scheme was uncovered with the cooperation of an unidentified New Jersey nursing home owner who agreed to tape conversations with 30 major suppliers of nursing homes in the metropolitan area.

During the conversations, some suppliers suggested the nursing home officials be billed for more than the amount actually purchased so the operator could receive a higher payment from Medicaid, Hynes said.

The suppliers then received kickbacks of from 5 to 33 per cent of their total billings, some of which involved deliveries that were never made.

When the vendors were called before a grand jury for questioning about the kickbacks, most denied knowledge of it, Hynes said, but some volunteered to tape their conversations with other nursing home operators.

Quake causes little damage in Peking

HONG KONG (UPI) — The eighth major earthquake to strike China this year sent Peking residents scurrying into the streets Monday night, but apparently caused little damage, reports from Peking indicated today.

There was no immediate report of any casualties, but the Uppsala Seismological Institute in Sweden said the quake was "big enough for certain damage."

Reporters who toured Peking by automobile Monday night said today they could find no signs of major damage.

The temblor, which rocked wide areas in the Hopeh province east of Peking, registered 6.7 on the open-ended Richter scale.

At least 100,000 persons were believed killed in a quake that struck the same region July 28. That quake registered 8.2 on the Richter.

Reporters in Peking quoted a Chinese foreign ministry spokesman as saying the latest quake was regarded as an aftershock of the July 28 quake.

Press reports from Peking said residents of the capital poured out of buildings carrying whatever belongings they could. Some left the city by bicycle for the open countryside.

There was no official announcement from the Chinese government on the quake.

Japanese reporters in Peking reported today that a quake warning was issued Sunday in the Tangshan area, 100 miles southeast of Peking, which was at the center of the July quake. The Kyodo news agency said residents were told to expect a major quake "in two or three days."

Scientists have counted at least eight significant earthquakes centered within China or along its borders this year. They defined major quakes as those with magnitudes of 6.5 or greater or ones that caused death or destruction.

Only hours before the latest quake, the official Chinese media accused Chiang Ching, widow of Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, and three other officials purged last month of obstructing relief work following the Tangshan disaster.

"They did not care a fig for the development of production or the safety of the people," the People's Daily newspaper said.

Da Fonz likes kids

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Da Fonz" as a kiddie shrink? So says Henry Winkler, who plays the ducktailed Milwaukee flash of the '50s.

Winkler was at a luncheon Monday as national chairman of the Marine Corps Reserve's annual "Toys for Tots" campaign, which collects Christmas toys for poor children.

He said he likes children and if he was not an actor would like to work with them, possibly as a child psychologist. He also said he wants to quit playing Arthur Fonzarelli after one more season.

Oil exec honored

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Thornton F. Bradshaw, president of Atlantic Richfield Oil Co., Monday night was presented with the Human Relations Award of the Los Angeles chapter of the American Jewish Committee, the first energy industry executive to receive the annual award.

Kelley on crime

ATLANTA (UPI) — FBI Director Clarence Kelley says increased emphasis must be placed on public awareness to prevent crime from establishing "permanent rule over our lives."

"Today, the question is not whether we will become victimized by crime, but when," Kelley told an Atlanta civic club Monday.

Kelley said the FBI had joined with police departments in Wilmington, Del., Norfolk, Va., DeKalb County, Ga., and Birmingham, Ala., in four pilot projects to demonstrate citizens can help reduce crime though low-cost, self-help measures.

Air Force wants to keep door open to B1 bomber production

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Air Force, caught in transition politics, is trying to put its best foot forward with President-elect Jimmy Carter while keeping the door open for production of its controversial B1 bomber.

An Air Force spokesman said Monday the service is trying to work out an arrangement with the maker of the B1, Rockwell International, that would give Carter additional time so he wouldn't have to make a final decision on fullscale production within a few days of taking office next Jan. 20.

Congress allowed the Ford administration to spend $87 million a month on the new plane in the current budget, but also required approval of any further spending by the White House next Feb. 1. The overall B1 project could cost $22.9 billion.

The Air Force and the Ford administration favor going ahead with production of the plane, but Carter has indicated he wants to take his own look at the costly program and may delay production.

The spokesman said the Air Force is seeking "some sort of solution that would not make a great gap in the contractor's work" but avoid going into regular production right away.

Negotiations are now going on between the Air Force and Rockwell for an agreement to replace the development contract, which expires at the end of November.

If it expires without a new contract being negotiated, work on the plane will stop and a later restart will cost more. But if the Air Force goes ahead and negotiates a regular production contract, it would pressure Carter for an early decision.

Air Force sources have said the service, which wants to get off on the right foot with a new administration, is anxious to avoid getting Carter "boxed in" to a decision shortly after taking office.

The bomber has come under strong criticism because of its cost, with opponents arguing it isn't needed to supplement missiles and the present fleet of B52 bombers. Latest Defense Department figures show the price of each B1 has risen to $93.8 million, based on purchasing 244 planes.

Mother dies without seeing imprisoned son

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — A 62-year-old woman died of cancer today without realizing her wish to see her son whom President Ford and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. wanted furloughed from a Mexican jail.

Mrs. Isabel Millard, 62, a retired schoolteacher, died at an Alameda, Calif., hospital. Her family said she held out hope until the end that she would see her son, Phillip Millard, who is serving a 6½ year sentence in Mexico for cocaine smuggling.

Other members of the family had volunteered to take Phillip's place in jail to assure his return.

President Ford pledged to "do what he can" to win the temporary release, Gray Davis, chief of staff to the governor, said Monday. Brown had telephoned Ford for help when his own efforts to aid the family were snarled by international red tape.

Kids may get adult flu shots

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of President Ford's swine flu immunization program says that, because of vaccine shortages, he "probably" would recommend that some children be given adult type shots in the event of a flu outbreak.

Dr. Delano Merriwether, chief of the program, Monday said, "If indeed there was evidence of an outbreak due to the swine flu virus we would have to reexamine the alternatives we have."

The U.S. Public Health Service Monday announced that only one in every 10 American children may get the shots because of a vaccine shortage. There would be enough vaccine, however, to immunize chronically ill children between 3 and 18 years of age, the health service said.

Merriwether was asked if he would recommend giving adult type single-stage vaccine to children if a swine flu case was verified. "That is probably so," he said.

Assistant Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Theodore Cooper said Monday that only eight million doses of the split-virus vaccine suitable for children will be available before February.

Since two inoculations would be necessary for each youngster, only four million of America's 40 million children between ages 3 and 18 could be immunized.

A Public Health Service spokesman said the shortage became evident three weeks ago when it was determined that children would need a split rather than a whole virus. Whole-virus vaccines caused more fever and other side effects in children during field tests.

Limited supplies of split-virus vaccine that are available will be sent to states on a population basis for distribution through big city clinics to children in crowded living conditions that make them more susceptible to infection. Some supplies also will be available for private doctors.

The $135 million swine flu campaign has faced malpractice insurance problems, scattered scientific opposition and, more recently, public apathy in some areas toward getting the shots.

Soroptimist event is Saturday

A dozen groups will participate

A dozen local organizations will join in the third annual community holiday bazaar sponsored by Soroptimist International of Lompoc. The event takes place this Saturday from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. in Veterans Memorial Hall. Beverly Hash and Evelyn Litzinger are cochairwomen.

Participating are Children's Home Society (Lumen Vitae League), Alpha Club, Girls Club of Lompoc, Quota Club, Queen of Angels Mission, Lompoc Valley Association for Retarded Persons, Optimists, Queen of Angels Altar Society, Vandenberg Officers Wives Club, St. Mary's Episcopal Church Women, Vandenberg Officers Wives Club and the YMCA Indian Guides Club. Soroptimists will conduct their own sales booth where handicraft, baked goods and candies will be offered.

Children's Home Society will feature Christmas decorations and gifts and children's toys; Methodist Women will offer arts and crafts items; Optimists will sell sacred records; Indian Guides, Hawaiian type jewelry.

St. Mary's Episcopal Church Women will have handicraft and needlework, as well as tickets on their holiday project of a handmade quilt. Alpha Club will promote their doll house project; Officers Wives Club will sell cookbooks, note paper and original prints of a former local artist member, LOVARC plans sale of arts and crafts items and cards made by their members; Queen of Angels Mission will sell handiwork. Quota Club's booth will feature "20 carrot" necklaces, woven paper baskets, crocheted necklaces, and "three little fish" of varied colors for bathroom decorations. Lompoc Girls Club offers something different in "prepared on the spot" pretzels. They will also sell soap gifts, ceramics, stuffed animals and baked goods. Queen of Angeles Church Altar Society will serve salads, desserts and burritos.

Adding to the festivity of the day will be the balloon salesman, Francine Silva Galley in the role of clown. Added entertainment will be music throughout the day by two organ students of Godden's Organ and Piano Center — Joel Otero and Stephanie Mowery. Also slated is a free movie, "The Bondi Family," courtesy of Lompoc Fire Department. Partially paid for by the Soroptimists, the film is for community education on fire prevention and smoke detection.

Soroptimist Club will also offer door prizes, including a hand crocheted queen sized bedspread made by Angie Guerra, a Boston rocker, gift certificates, two dinners, a dry floral arrangement, a huge beer mug, a Merry Gro greenhouse and a framed press flower picture.

Money earned by the Soroptimist Club's bazaar is used each year to support community service projects. Latest such was the physical therapy equipment purchased for the local Convalescent Care Center at the cost of $2,100.

PLAYING THE CLOWN at third annual community holiday bazaar sponsored by Soroptimist Club this Saturday in Veterans Memorial Hall, Francine Silva Galley will sell balloons as she greets and entertains visitors to the event. Hours are from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. Approving her costume, Evelyn Litzinger, cochairman (with Beverly Hash) shows a giant beer mug which is one of the prizes to be awarded.

Taped interviews played for sorority program

"Communications: Public Relations and the Press" was title of the program given by Fran (Mrs. Bill) Chatterly for Xi Lambda Iota Beta Sigma Phi sorority. Dolores (Mrs. Tom) Septer was hostess.

Taped interviews of various persons were played, these answering such queries as "What news do you like best?" "Do you like good or bad news?" "Which part of the newspaper do you read first?"

Helping the hostess in serving refreshments was Pat (Mrs. Ron) Beaudry. A transferee from Little Rock, Ark., she chose to join Xi Lambda Iota chapter and received a ritual of welcome conducted by Martha (Mrs. Thomas) Hicks, president. She was also installed as corresponding secretary.

A Mexican luncheon was the social event Nov. 7 in the home of Mrs. Septer, chapter vice president, who prepared the menu of wine punch, salad, sour cream enchiladas, refried beans and Spanish rice.

Honorees were members of ritual of jewels chapters who are ready to progress to an exemplar chapter next May. The guests were Irene (Mrs. John) Murphy, Connie (Mrs. Bob) Smith, Judi (Mrs. Lee) Mann, Carol (Mrs. Duane) Leigh, and a special guest, Donna (Mrs. Ronald) Williams, "secret sister" keeper of the names for the chapter.

Members attending were Carol (Mrs. Bud) Pryor, Martha (Mrs. Tom) Hicks, Sherrie (Mrs. Steven) Fowler, Mary (Mrs. Mike) Porath, Ketrenia (Mrs. Jim) Hall, Fran (Mrs. Bill) Chatterly, Ms. Eva Tolman, Peggy (Mrs. Bob) Hebert, Jackie (Mrs. Tony) Lodle and Ms. Glenda Miller.

Mexican casseroles were the main dishes at a recent potluck dinner and "Calico Shindig" held at Alpha Clubhouse. Salads and desserts completed the menu. Entertainment was a square dance to the calls of Jake Felde of Boots and Satellites Square Dance Club.

Members and escorts of Omega Pi and Chi Phi chapters joined those of Xi Lambda: Glenda Miller, Joe Reagin, Margaret and Richard Miranda, Peggy and Bob Hebert, Sherrie and Steve Fowler, Martha and Tom Hicks, Jackie and Tony Lodle and Eva Tolman.

Next chapter meeting is slated for Thursday night in the home of Mrs. Pryro. Martha Hicks will present the program entitled "Fine Arts-Literature."

Local auxiliaries to attend meeting

Members of the local American Legion Auxiliaries, Lompoc 211 and Vandenberg 125, will attend the 16th district meeting Nov. 20-21 in Cambria. Mrs. Vernon Kuhl, auxiliary president of the Department of California, will make her official visit Nov. 21. A 31-year auxiliary member, she has held many offices and committee assignments on local and district level and given distinguished service on state level.

The two-day meeting of auxiliaries will be conducted over the weekend at the Cambria Veterans Memorial Building. District 16 is comprised of units from Simi Valley south, to Paso Robles north.

Presiding Sunday will be Julia Dorsey, district president, member of Oxnard Unit 48. A school of instruction is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday. All members are urged to attend, especially those who are new to the organization. All unit presidents will be in the receiving line for the reception slated for the department president Sunday at 9 a.m.

For any additional information regarding the meeting members may contact Oneida Brooks, 3276 Via Dona, Mission Hills, or Margaret Maltman, 6-0977.

Scholarships are program topic

International Peace Scholarships will be the program topic at the regular meeting of Chapter SQ P.E.O. Nov. 17 at 9:30 a.m. in the home of Helen (Mrs. Robert) Mosely, 4129 Oakwood Circle. Assisting hostess is Virginia (Mrs. Warner) Newby.

Special guests will be the members of Chapter TX of Solvang. Providing information concerning the purpose, requirements, and studies of some of the IPS recipients are Dorothy (Mrs. Paul) Adamson and Dorothy (Mrs. Preston) Smith. Members corresponded with a Japanese girl who received a scholarship and attended the University of California at Los Angeles last year.

Unaffiliated and visiting P.E.O.s are invited to call the president, Robin (Mrs. C.F.) Stirling at 734-2311.

Seniors invited

Senior citizens who wish to attend the Thanksgiving dinner hosted by Vandenberg NCO Club Nov. 25 at Surf Mist on base, may call the Community Building, 217 W. Maple Ave., 5-1178 regarding reservations and transportation. Assisting them at the senior opportunity and service office will be Pat Johnson and Marge White. A special price of $2.95 will be charged the seniors for the complete turkey dinner. Serving hours are noon, 2:30 and 5 p.m.

Plans have been made for transportation by bus from Lompoc to the base. Reservations may be made by others Monday-Friday, by calling 4-4361. Family groups are invited.

Thursday meeting

Lompoc Republican Women's Club (Fed.) will hold its monthly meeting this Thursday at 10 a.m. in the home of Lil (Mrs. Clifford John) McDowell, 4158 Clubhouse Road. Interested guests are welcome.

Orval Stubbs is re-elected Grange master

Orval Stubbs has been re-elected for a third-year term as master of Lompoc Grange. Others named to serve in the coming year are: Johnnie Fraters, overseer; George Tuers, lecturer; Marshall Hamlin, steward; Harry Flora, assistant steward; Florence Flora, assistant lady steward; Juanita Hamlin, chaplain; Mel Dildine, gatekeeper; Amy Stubbs, secretary; Marie Streyle, treasurer; Janie Gonzales, Ceres; Verna Meyers, Pomona; Scottie Naismith, Flora. Tony Armas was named on the executive committee; Vernelle Poorbaugh, as musician.

Members voted Dec. 11 as date for their Christmas party. The holiday potluck dinner will be served at 6:30 o'clock and a gift exchange will follow. Parents will provide a gift for each of their children. Santa will make his appearance later in the evening with popcorn balls for all and will present the children's gifts. The Christmas tree will be provided by Floresta 4-H Club.

Because of the Thanksgiving holiday no fourth Thursday meeting will be held this month. Next session will be Dec. 9 at 8 p.m. in Grange Hall.

At the election meeting last week the Grange charter was draped in memory of a charter member, Frank Nicoli.

Fillmore slates annual hobby show

Fillmore School will have their annual hobby show at the PTA meeting Nov. 18. The event will take place in the multipurpose room at 7 p.m. Students will have their hobbies on display and be on hand to explain them. Marge Baker, teacher and chairman of the hobby show, will present the participants with awards.

Also planned for the evening program is a presentation by Marty Bultz, school psychologist, on "How Children Aquire Self-Evaluation."

Everyone is invited to attend.

Dear Abby

Lord will forgive if you leave him

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have raised 14 children, eight daughters and six sons, here in the coal fields of the Southeast. All were raised in the church. (My husband teaches a Bible class.)

Seven years ago one of my daughters, then 15, became pregnant. I couldn't believe it and was heartbroken. My husband insisted that she be sent away, and her baby left wherever it was born. I defied him, saw my daughter through the birth and am now raising her little boy. My once tenderhearted, precious daughter has become a lesbian and has fallen into the use of alcohol and drugs.

Six weeks ago she revealed to me that her own father is the baby's father, too! I also learned that he had molested our other daughters as they were growing up. No one would tell me, but immediately after high school graduation they would leave home to work. Now I know why!

For the first time in my life, prayer has not brought me the wisdom I need now. I am 58, a diabetic, ailing physically and longing for peace of mind. My 60-year-old husband repels me. Would you leave him or endure till death separates you? Please help me.

CRUSHED

DEAR CRUSHED: If ever a mother of 14 children deserved their understanding and help, you do. They can help make life bearable again. Go to them.

You husband is a very sick man, and unless he goes for treatment and recovers completely (which I doubt he will), the Lord will forgive you for not being a wife to him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an ordained minister who doesn't charge a fee to officiate at weddings for families in his congregation.

Last summer he performed six ceremonies. They were all lovely church affairs followed by receptions and dinners, and the night before, there were rehearsal dinners. Abby, my husband and I never got one invitation to any of these festivities!

One bride's mother said to my husband after the ceremony, "Oh, please stay for the reception and dinner, and phone your wife and tell her to come over right away?" (He politely declined.)

Another bride told him, "We didn't invite you and your wife to our wedding reception because we figured you'd be too busy to come."

The other four brides didn't even ask my husband to stay after the ceremony, but one saw him on the street a few months later and said, "How come you didn't stay for the dinner? We had a place set for you!"

My husband's brother is a minister in Illinois, and he and his wife are invited to all the affairs related to the wedding. And he is paid a fee, too. What's the matter with the people in California, Abby?

LEFT OUT

DEAR LEFT: California is a large state. Pinpoint the place, and I'll give them the needle.

DEAR ABBY: To those who write you about problems with relatives, may I submit what I call Einstein's Second or Revised Law on Relativity: Your chances of getting along with your relatives increases directly in proportion with the distance you keep away from them.

Is Congress giving us our money's worth?

By HAROLD BLUMENFELD

Now that the election is over, let's talk a little bit about what we voters should expect from the congressmen we returned or are sending to Capitol Hill for the first time.Lost in all the brou-ha-ha for the presidential candidates was the major role congressmen have in the ebb-and-flow of America's present and future. Are we voters getting our tax-dollars' worth of effective service from these elected officials?

Theirs may not be among the highest-paid jobs in the country compared to the income of large corporation executives or professional athletes. But it's a job they sought and campaigned for.. They weren't drafted for their jobs. They did get a recent salary increase and now make $44,625 a year. But it's the fringe benefits that count and it's estimated that the expense for our men and women in Congress totals $71 million dollars, at the rate of $132,000 per legislator, a rise of perhaps 30 per cent in 10 years.

Congressmen have free office space in Washington and maintain one or more offices in their home districts, also at government expense. Each has a staff of, at least, 16 people, with an average salary of upwards of $18,000, which is more than most individuals in the aging population can put together from Social Security benefits, small dividends and bank interest, and income from odd jobs they may be able to find.

They have unlimited sick leave and also free medical treatment at Walter Reed and Bethesda Naval Hospital, and this sort of private national health plan is also available to their families. A whopping $7,500 is allotted to each congressman for "general expenses," which doesn't have to be accounted for. It can be carried over for years and when a legislator leaves office it's a wonderful "unofficial" pension to bank along with the official large pension.

We may cringe at the climbing postal rates when we drop our few letters in the mail box, but franking privileges are part of a congressman's free operational expense. It means he can send out thousands of pieces of mail each day without having to lick one 13 cent stamp. Which probably is permissable for government and congressional matters, but a legislator's personal mail and campaign literature often gets a free ride through the postal system.

Each congressman is allowed 26 trips a year to his home, with you and me paying the cost, which is a lump sum of about $7,500. And it appears that some of our legislators have been padding their expense accounts to show they drove although they had flown. Because the allowance for car mileage is greater than a first-class plane ticket.

You and I would like to take vacation trips abroad. But we can't afford them. Yet we pay for the foreign jaunts of our people in Congress. In addition to the 60 holidays scheduled for them, many seem to be ever so ready to fly to faraway places around the globe, with the excuse that they are "inspection trips." I call them "junkets," and very often they take along members of their families (or friends), at taxpayers' expense.

The low-cost excellent meals served in the Capitol dining rooms are much tastier and more nutritious than those we get at a lunchroom counter or while pushing a tray in a cafeteria. Undoubtedly less-expensive and maybe better than the meals we can prepare at home. There are other freebies available to them in Washington — a gym, barbershop, free shines each day, and so many more items which cost us money.

The House recently acted on charges that the chairman of an important committee which controls the spending of billions of military dollars had failed to declare ownership of stock in a major defense contractor. He also failed to list the stock he owned in a bank which he had helped establish through his official congressional position.

He was repremanded.

The other day an unfortunate scene took place in front of our local supermarket.An elderly woman was caught after she had shoplifted a can of tuna, a can of soup and a can of spaghetti. She hadn't pilfered anything to make money. She was poor and she was hungry.

Stealing is a crime. The store manager didn't call the police. She wasn't arrested.

But she was reprimanded.

However, she couldn't keep any of the things she had taken.

USHERING in the Yuletide season, an 11th annual Christmas Gift Shop and Bazaar will be held by the Women's Association of the Santa Ynez Valley Presbyterian Church Saturday, Dec. 4 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Veterans Memorial Building in Solvang. Checking some of the many Christmas gift items for the event are Margaret Neff, left, and Joan Rutherford, cochairwomen, and booth chairmen Harriet Van Pelt and Janet Cass. Santa Claus is due to attend the event to have photographs taken with the children.

Valley briefs

Board to meet

A meeting of the board of trustees of the Ballard Elementary School will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the school. A routine agenda will mark the session, a board spokesman said.

BBA to elect

New officers will be elected at a dinner meeting of the Buellton Business Assn., Thursday night at Pea Soup Andersen's Restaurant in Buellton.

Dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m. with the meeting set to start at 8 o'clock. The session will be the final one of the year for the organization.

The new officers will be installed jointly with the Solvang Business Assn., officers at a dinner and dance in January in the Juliette Room of Andersen's.

Bazaar planned

The social club of Rancho Club Mobile Estates in Buellton will stage a bazaar Saturday from 7:30 to 10 p.m. in the clubhouse.

The bazaar will feature a variety of baked goods and a large array of tables filled with gift items for the Christmas holiday season.

One of the highlights of the evening will be a cake walk by all those in attendance.

Cookies and coffee will be available and punch will be served.

Band wins award

The Santa Ynez Valley High School Pirate Marching Band directed by Daniel J. Neece captured a fourth place award last Saturday in a Hawthorne Band Review.

The event was marked by the appearance of 34 high school bands competing in four divisions based on school population.

Party discussion

Plans for a Ballard community Christmas party will be discussed at a meeting of the Ballard Improvement and Protective Assn., Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Ballard School.

No other items are on the agenda, according to chairman Judy Adams.

Soil film slated

"Stewards of the Soil," a new five-screen 35mm slide presentation from Stauffer Chemical Company will be presented at an Agro-Business meeting Wednesday at 12:15 p.m. at the Holiday Inn, 1407 East Main Street, Santa Maria.

Grange installs

The Santa Ynez Valley Grange will hold its annual installation of new officers at the Grange Hall in Los Olivos next Tuesday at 8 p.m. The event is open to the public.

Hugo Esposito will lead the group of new officers as he assumes for a third term the office of Grange Master. The new officers will be seated by John Tendeland, of Los Alamos, California Grange state deputy for Santa Barbara County, and members of his team.

Refreshments will be served after the ceremonies. Members attending have been asked to provide sandwiches.

SOME WALNUT growers in the Santa Ynez Valley with older, low yield trees have cleared their orchards to allow for the utilization of the land for other crops, including alfalfa and grain. Although the Santa Ynez Valley as a whole has remained even acreage wise during the past decade, total acreage in Santa Barbara County has dropped materially from 2,661 acres in 1958 to 1,995 acres in 1975. Current statewide trend is for growers to obtain new sites for walnut production in Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys.

County's walnut crop ranking slips

Although acreage in the Santa Ynez Valley has remained constant for the most part during a period from 1968 to 1975, an in depth report on trends in walnut acreage and production in the current issue of Diamond Walnut News reveals that Santa Barbara County's state rank has slipped from 15th in 1958 to the "all others" category in 1975.

According to Diamond Walnut News, Santa Barbara County, one of the first and at one time one of the foremost producers of walnuts in California, had an acreage of 2,661 in 1958.

According to Farm Adviser George Goodall of the Extension Service, walnut acreage in the county in 1975 moved downward to 1,995 acres.

Although he had no exact figures for the number of acres planted to walnuts in the Santa Ynez Valley (all are categorized under deciduous orchards with the bulk probably in walnuts), Goodall said the figure for the valley in 1968 was 560 acres. This was lowered to 490 acres in 1975.

It is known that some additional land has been planted to walnuts during the past decade in the valley, but it is also known that several plantings on smaller acreages, including trees that were placed in the ground 30 to 50 years ago, have been removed to make way for more profitable crops.

In the statewide ranking for 1958, San Joaquin led with 17,672, Four counties, including Santa Barbara, Santa Clara, Riverside, and Los Angeles, were included in 1958 but do not appear on the 1975 state acreage list.

Tulare was first last year with 30, 391 acres, and a quartet of counties added included Glenn, Yolo, San Benito, and Madera.

Total acreage in walnuts in 1958 in the state was 153,525. A marked increased is noted in 1975 with the total reaching 207,501.

In its lead paragraph to the report-story, Diamond Walnut News said "1976 will draw an era to a close. The Las Armas Rancho, one of the first commercial walnut plantings in California, located in Goleta Valley, will cease walnut production after this year's harvest.

"Historically this orchard was a part of the Dos Pueblos land grant deeded to Nicholaus Den by the Mexican Governor, Alvarado, of Alta California in 1842. The original grant included more than 15,500 acres of the Goleta Valley, extending from the Pacific Ocean to the Santa Ynez Mountains.

"Although the removal of walnut production from Las Armas Rancho property will have little significance upon the future of the walnut industry, it does illustrate a continuing trend."

Mobile home park stand reaffirmed

Reaffirmation of a stand opposing a proposed mobile home park development south of the Avenue of Flags in Buellton has been expressed by members of the board of trustees of the Buellton Union School District.

The district is against the proposal because of the potential impact on the school enrollment which now stands at 407, close to a record of 420 and only 43 short of the maximum number of students the school can accommodate.

The board directed District Supt. R.O. Johnson to attend future County Planning Commission and County supervisors meetings on which the mobile home development is scheduled to appear on the agenda.

In other action, the board approved an expenditure of $2,500 under Title IV-B for the purchase of library and textbooks and audio visual equipment.

Trustees also set the date of March 8 for a governing board election. The terms of a trio of incumbent trustees, Ed Rife, Gil Moore, and David FitzGerald are expiring.

Booster Club bake sale set Friday

Continuing its fund-raising activities, the newly organized Pirate Band Booster Club of Santa Ynez Valley High School will hold a bake sale Friday at El Rancho Market on Highway 246 near the high school starting at 10 a.m.

Proceeds will be used to pay the balance on spats purchased for the band.

A recent car wash and bake sale sponsored by the club in Solvang produced proceeds of $182.70.

A rummage sale is tentatively set between Thanksgiving and Christmas, Daniel J. Neece, music director announced.

Bazaar called huge success

The 23rd annual Autumn Bazaar staged by Women of the Santa Ynez Valley Grange last Saturday at the Grange Hall in Los Olivos was termed a "huge success," by Mrs. Hortense Freeman, chairman,

"It was one of the most profitable bazaars the Grange Women have ever held," she declared.

Awarded the prize of a cedar chest was Mrs. William Phelps III of Ballard.

The bazaar was sponsored by the Committee of Women's Activities of the Grange. New officers of the group were recently elected. They include Mrs. Freeman, who was reelected chairman; Lottie Mansfield, vice chairman; Margaret Vernor, treasurer and Essie Esposito, secretary.

School holiday

Students in the College School District, can look forward to another respite from the classrooms next Thursday, when a school holiday is observed at the district's Santa Ynez, College and San Marcos schools.

The school holiday is being called for parent-teacher conferences which will be held at the Santa Ynez School from 9 a.m. to noon, from 1 to 4 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m. Grades kindergarten through fifth will be dismissed at 2 p.m. Nov. 17 and 19 for afternoon conferences with the teachers.

Holiday promotional plans being firmed

Final plans for off-season and preholiday newspaper promotion of Solvang in a number of Santa Barbara and Ventura County newspapers will be made at a meeting of the retail merchants division of the Solvang Business Assn., today at Restaurant Margaret and Paul.

Retailers director Ed Dotz also announced plans for the annual Solvang Christmas window unveiling party which will be held Friday night, Dec. 3 at 8 o'clock. Julia Rasmussen will serve as chairman of the event. She and members of her committee will serve coffee and other refreshments in front of Slik Huset ice cream shop along Copenhagen Drive and the Village Band and the Village Folk Dancers will provide entertainment.

The window unveiling is marked by the unmasking simultaneously at 8 p.m. of all of Solvang's shop windows which will be appropriately decorated in the Yuletide theme. Many of the displays will place the emphasis on Denmark and Scandinavian wares and customs.

Solvang's annual Christmas parade featuring the appearance of Santa Claus is set for Saturday afternoon, Dec. 11 at 2 p.m. Mrs. Arnold Guynn is parade chairman.

SBA directors voted to hold this month's regular meeting on Monday Nov. 22 at 8 p.m. at the Veterans Memorial Building in Solvang sans the usual premeeting social hour and dinner. The session will be marked by the election of new officers.

16th annual national horse show scheduled

Preparations are under way at Earl Warren Showgrounds for the 16th annual Santa Barbara National Amateur Horse Show, which starts on Wednesday and goes through November 28, in two sections. According to Horse Show Manager Allen Ross, this event is classified as one of the largest horse shows on record anywhere in the world. It is sponsored by the 19th District Agricultural Association and will be judged by experts from the eastern seaboard, midwest and three California cities.

Voted the most popular judge in the United States, Don Burt, of Portuguese Bend, Ca., heads the list. He has judged events in Madison Square Garden, Montreal, and at the Pennsylvania National. He will select winners in the Western Horses and Stock Seat Equitation events, along with Russell Franklin of San Martin, while Eli Long, of Solana Beach is scheduled to judge Saddle Horses, Walking Horses, Welsh Ponies, and Saddle Seat Equitation, during the first section of the Show from November 17 through 20.

Ray Francis of Jacksonville, Florida will be on hand, with Gerald Helder of Augusta, Mich., John L. Slaughter, of West Bloomfield, Mich., and Burt to judge the Hunters, Jumpers and Hunter Seat Equitation competitions from November 23 through 28.

Ross reports that Richard Shrake, of Oregon City, Ore. who has judged western events here previously, likes Santa Barbara so much that he is bringing a stable of eight western horses to the Show.

Other Show officials include Santa Barbaran Warren M. Underwood, as Show Steward; Harriet Landrum of Goleta, as Show Secretary; Ringmasters Larry Alcorn, Peter Looker, and Ted Fieger, all from Santa Barbara; Mr. Ross, as Announcer, with James L. Haggin, of Santa Barbara and Malcolm Rossoll of Fresno. The Show Veterinarian will be Dr. Willard Ommert of Rancho California; Gunnar Gatski of Santa Barbara is Farrier; Jarvis Esenwein, of Fountain Valley, is Course Designer; Ring Foreman-Trail Horse Designer will be Ray Gillen of Yreka and June Fallaw of Pittsburg is the photographer.

Separatists win Quebec election

MONTREAL (UPI) — Rene Levesque's Parti Quebecois scored a stunning victory over the ruling Liberal Party Monday in a historic decision, which could lead to Quebec's secession from Canada.

In his victory speech to 8,000 jubiliant party faithful, a weeping Levesque declared he would lead Canada's largest province to independence "only when an adult society has proven itself with a clear majority in a referendum."

Constitutional experts explained that for Quebec to legally become a politically sovereign state it would need the approval of the federal government, the other nine provinces and the British Parliament, which controls Canada's constitution, the British North America Act. They said this approval would be impossible to attain.

The Parti Quebecois made solid gains over the ruling Liberals throughout the mainly French-speaking province and less than two hours after the polls closed the PQ's majority win was called.

Final, but unofficial results, showed the PQ had won 70 of the 110 seats in the provincial legislature. The PQ won only only six in the last election in 1973. Premier Robert Bourassa, defeated in his own Mercier riding, saw his solid Liberal majority of 102 elected in 1973 slashed to only 27 seats.

The Union National under Rodrigue Biron, chosen party leader only six months ago, took 11 seats. The UN had ruled Quebec for 40 years but was all but wiped out in 1973, elected in only one constituency.

The fledgling Parti Nationale Populaire and the Ralliement Creditiste were each elected to one seat in the National Assembly.

Levesque, 54, promised his party would bear the responsibility of government "in the name of everyone. We will not forget a single one." He said he hoped Quebec would "keep friendly with the rest of the people in Canada ... but in a country that we want."

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, whose federal Liberal government has its power base in Quebec, showed bitter disappointment at the PQ victory and said Canada's constitution would be enforced.

"In a democratic election, Quebec voters granted the Parti Quebecois enough seats to form the next government," Trudeau said.

But the prime minister added, "Mr. Levesque and his party have been granted a mandate to form a provincial government, not to separate that province from the rest of Canada."

OPEC hardliners to seek price increase

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — U.S. efforts to avert an increase in the world oil price have little chance of success, according to sources close to the world's major oil producers.

The sources said economic experts of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will recommend an oil price increase to OPEC's ministerial meeting Dec. 15 at Qatar.

OPEC's Economic Commission convened Monday for a one-week conference to prepare a report for the oil ministers.

"They can only make recommendations," an OPEC source said. "The decisions will be taken by the ministers."

There was little doubt among oil experts that the Economic Commission of the 13-member organization will recommend an increase in the oil price that has remained frozen in the last two ministerial meetings.

"The price of oil must be maintained by linking it to the price of manufactured goods," one source said.

OPEC hardliners, led by Iran, said the price of goods they import from the West has risen 35 per cent during the past three years.

In Washington, U.S. officials said last week the United States is using world opinion and an appeal to the oil producers' own financial interests to try to avert a world oil price increase.

The U.S. efforts, the sources said, have little chance of success.

Unofficial reports from the Middle East have said a price increase of as much as 10 to 20 per cent may be ordered by the oil ministers next month.

Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, has been mainly responsible for the oil price freezes at the last two ministerial meetings. This time, however, the atmosphere is different.

King Khaled of Saudi Arabia said in an interview published in New York his country would have liked an oil price freeze until the end of 1977 but obligations to other OPEC members "may preclude such a freeze."

The Saudis are said to be agreeable now to what is called a "nominal" price increase.

Oil experts said this means a 10 per cent increase that would be well below the hardliners' demand for a 25-per-cent raise, which they say would be justified in view of Western inflation.

Industrial production drops first time since recovery began year ago

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Factories, mines and utilities cut production of goods and materials 0.7 per cent in September and October for the first drop since the economic recovery began, the government says.

"These reductions include the effects of strikes in the farm equipment and automotive industries," the Federal Reserve Board said Monday. "The direct strike effect is estimated to have accounted for somewhat less than one-third of the October decline."

But other production not connected with the strikes also fell. "Output of home goods, such as appliances, carpeting and furniture was reduced ... (and) production of nondurable consumer goods, particularly clothing, also decreased," the board said.

Production of textiles, paper and chemicals "declined sharply," the board said.

Declines of 0.2 per cent in September and 0.5 per cent in October were foreboding for the nation's 7.5 million unemployed, since higher industrial production is mandatory for any major improvement in the jobless rate.

In another piece of bad news, the Commerce Department said business inventories increased 0.9 per cent in September, largely because of weaker sales.

The reports were sure to spark renewed interest in a tax cut, especially for lower and middle income workers, to stimulate the economy. President-elect Jimmy Carter said he would ask Congress for a tax cut directed at low and middle income workers if evidence developed that the economy was weakening.

In the past year, the average worker's spendable income after taxes and inflation fell 0.8 per cent. The tax rebates in April 1975 pumped $17 billion into the economy, increased spendable earnings 1 per cent and ended the worst recession since World War II.

But production improvements that began then ground to a halt in September. Production fell again in October.

The Federal Reserve Board said last month that production was unchanged in September. But the estimate was revised Monday to a 0.2 per cent decline — the first fall since a 0.8 per cent dip in March, 1975.

The board said production of consumer durable goods such as cars, refrigerators and the like fell 1.7 per cent, nondurables fell 0.2 per cent, business equipment 1.1 per cent and materials 0.5 per cent. The only positive sign in the report was construction supplies, up 0.1 per cent.

Despite the strike at Ford, auto manufacturers managed to assemble at a 7.7 million unit annual rate — unchanged from September. Production of business equipment dropped largely because of the farm equipment strike.

The board said its index of industrial production stood at 130.4 in October, down from 131.3 in August.

Hughes Air West accord is reached

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Tentative agreement has been reached on a new contract for some 586 Hughes Air West airlines mechanics and aircraft cleaners.

The agreement, reached Monday, followed a 30-minute strike earlier in the day by members of the Aircraft Mechanics Fraternal Association.

Details of the new pact were not released pending a ratification meeting.

The short-lived strike was called off when workers, encouraged by reports of progress in negotiations, decided to go back to work for at least another day.

The mechanics and cleaners had been working under the old contract which expired in September, 1975.

Talks have been continuing off and on for the past 17 months with wages, work rules and pensions the key issues of dispute.

Hughes Air West serves 55 cities in eight Western states, Mexico and Canada.

High unemployment to persist: Carter

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter has informed the American public that it must endure unemployment of 5 to 7 per cent for at least another three years.

This statement and others at a Monday news conference raised the question of whether Carter is shifting some emphasis from fighting unemployment to avoiding inflation.

During his campaign, Carter repeatedly said that his administration's top priority would be putting 8 million unemployed persons back to work. He did not say Monday that he had changed his mind, but he said no one should expect him to do so overnight or to ignore the possibility of inflation.

"I would guess that would be a likely prospect," said Carter when asked whether he expected unemployment to remain in the range of 5 to 7 per cent.

The question was raised because Carter said at several points that his goal was to get unemployment down to 4.5 per cent by the end of his four-year term and to balance the federal budget.

Within that framework, he said, inflation could be brought down to the 4 to 5 per cent level.

With Carter was longtime aide Jody Powell, who, he said, would be his White House press secretary, the first appointment of the Carter administration. Powell also served as Carter's press secretary when he was governor of Georgia.

The economy and foreign policy dominated the news conference, with Carter also saying he probably would not ask Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns to resign, that he would not sacrifice new social programs even if the economy remained poor, and that he might cut foreign aid to Chile and other countries if they did not change their attitudes on human rights.

Carter said he felt unemployment could be brought down to the 5.5 per cent level without releasing any inflationary pressures in the economy, but beyond that point there would be "trade-offs" between unemployment and inflation.

Carter also said he will meet with Burns in Washington next week and would not rule out the possibility that he would ask Burns to resign although Burns' term is not yet up. "My first inclination of course, would be to work with him harmoniously and let him stay on as chairman," Carter said.

The president-elect said relations with Chile will be "very seriously affected by an absence of concern for human rights." He said 80 per cent of Food for Peace funds in the Western Hemisphere went to Chile and added:

"I think the allocation of foreign aid and the normal friendship of our country would be determined or affected certainly by the attitude of those countries toward human rights."

"Merit Delivers More Taste Than Higher Tar Cigarettes."

–American Institute of Consumer Opinion

Extensive taste testing shows Merit delivers flavor of cigarettes having 60% more tar.

The bottom line was conclusive:

In a series of taste tests conducted for MERIT by the American Institute of Consumer Opinion,* smokers from across the country judged MERIT to have more flavor than five leading low tar cigarette brands.

What's really startling —and of major importance to all smokers—is that MERIT has less tar than these five brands.

MERIT and MERIT MENTHOL

Less tar. Yet more taste.

That's the report on a remarkable new taste process called 'Enriched Flavor.'™ A way to pack extra flavor into tobacco without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now smoke the cigarette. MERIT.

Unprecedented smoking pleasure at only 9 mg. tar.

'Erl paintin' is what I like'

Rocky studies Picasso's moves

By IRA BERKOW

Uptown on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan, crowds file into the Metropolitan Museum of Art to view the Rembrandts, the Van Goghs, the Picassos, the new Andrew Wyeth exhibit and recent additions to the Egyptian collection featuring mummies from the time of Queen Tiy. Meanwhile, in midtown another jewel of our culture toils away in relative obscurity.

"I like to paint," said Rocky Graziano, "because it's very, very — it's sometin' in my life what makes me feel good and it always has since I started wit' it in the Reformatory, the Cat'lic Protectorate in the Bronx, when I was tirteen and it was good even for kids because then you don't have to just be in sports or robbin' or bookmakin' to get along.

"It gives you pride, like you done sometin', like, ma, look, I made this pitcher myself."

Graziano is 54 years old and weighs 159 pounds, the same weight as when he was middleweight champion of the world in the late 1940s. His broad, friendly, lumpy face is a palpable reminder of his early pug years, and a conceivable model for a George Bellows boxing oil. Rocky may be best known for the zestful television commercials in which he always plays himself, Rocky Graziano, an original, to be sure, and perhaps a masterpiece.

A delight for Graziano is to set up an easel on the terrace of his penthouse apartment on a sunny day.

"I take my shirt off and get a sun-bat' while I'm workin' over de canvas," he said.

"Erl paintin' is what I like most because you can mix 'em around pretty good and you can take it off and put it on. See, when you t'row on a water color you gotta stick wit' it.

"I paint bright. Green and red and white are my favorite colors, believe it or not. Come to t'ink of it, my boxin' robe was green and white. So I always liked dem colors. And red, too, Yeah, t'row red in wit' em.

"Some people who aren't bums and are supposed to know about art tell me I got good perspective and good coordination. My subjects are anything I see — a building, a face, a cab passin' by. You can see that from the paintings up on the walls of my house. I got 10 or 12 or 15 of 'em hangin'."

Graziano says he doesn't sell any of his paintings because he prefers to keep them and "can afford not to sell 'em." He says he has saved enough money to retire now, if he'd wish.

"I loaned a paintin' to a friend," said Rocky. "It was my favorite. A big round one. Then he wanted to auction it. I told him I was gonna kill him if he did."

Graziano explained where he first learned some art technique. "In reform school I was in readin' and writin' and I was a belligerent kid, a bad pain in the fanny — I couldn't cope wit' studying, so they sent me to a thing called art class. Great. No stuydin'. What it was was learnin' to write big letters wit' shadowing.

"And from letterin' I learned how to draw, and then how to mix colors. I didn't start to paint until I was a young fighter in 1944 and trainin' at Greenwood Lake. I saw a guy paintin' the lake. I looked over his shoulder and said, 'Hey, why don't ya mix this color wit' this one?" He said, "How the hell you know that?"

"Well I had time on my hands when trainin' was over for the day and I began paintin' the lake myself.

"In later years I even did copies of Picasso. I couldn't afford to buy originals. I copied three or four or five. They're good, but you just don't paint like Picasso. He had a helluva perspective himself. He was fantastic. People thought he was weird at first, but he took off like a champ, which he was, a champ in his own field. He had guts enough to do stuff people thought was nuttin' but a rag."

Rembrandt? "Oh, treemendous."

And DaVinci? "Un-flippin'-believable! In those days when he was paintin' they didn't even make colors. They scrubbed from the brick to make red and scrubbed from sandstone to make white. Then they put it in water so's it'd stick.

"When you see some of the old-timers, that's why their paintings are so dark — colors was hard to come by. Not like today where you got a cherce of eight zillion colors."

He mentioned also that he was fond of the Impressionists and their use of bright colors.

He was asked if he was familiar with Van Gogh.

Graziano replied, "Yeah, very familiar. I didn't know the guy, but I saw his pitchers.

"These guys we're talkin' about, I couldn't kiss their fannies. Put that down. They were the real champs of the art department. I was the champ of the art department in reform school. I used to kick the hell out of every kid in the class."

Then Rocky's broken-nosed face broke into a very sweet smile.

GRAZIANO THE ARTIST: "Some people who aren't bums and are supposed to know about art tell me I got good perspective and good cordination."

Davis bound for Tampa?

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Former Southern California All-American Anthony Davis "decided Tampa was where I belonged," bought his way out of Toronto and met with Buccaneer officials about a possible multiyear contract to play under his old coach, John McKay.

Davis and his agent, Mike Trope, met with Tampa Bay Operations' Director Ron Wolf late Monday after Davis paid to buy out his contract with the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Results of the talks, which took place at a resort complex near the Bucs' training center, were not revealed. Wolf was unavailable early today and a Bucs' spokesman said he could not comment on the situation.

"Let's just say that we'd like it (a contract) to be more than one and less than 10 years," Trope said. "Anthony's previous professional contracts have been too highly publicized, so I don't want to get into specifics."

Under National Football League rules, Davis cannot play for the punchless Bucs this season, but would be available next year.

CIF info

Lompoc to host Burroughs High

The Lompoc Braves will play the Burroughs High Indians from Burbank in Friday night's opening round of the CIF 3-A playoffs at Huyck Stadium.

Burroughs won a five-team playoff held last night to determine the Foothill League's second-place representative. Burroughs owns a 4-5 overall record and was 4-3 in league play.

Cabrillo will play the Foothill League champion Crescenta Valley High Falcons Friday night at the Glendale High Stadium in Glendale. Crescenta Valley is undefeated (9-0) and rated second in the 3-A.

The Braves and Conqs are in separate brackets in the pairings and thus could not possibly meet until the finals. The Braves, should they win their first two playoff games, would likely run up against the 3-A's top rated team, South Pasadena, in the quarterfinals.

Santa Ynez High will be at Fillmore High Friday in the first round of the 1-A playoffs.

Scouting reports

Watch this week's Record for complete scouting reports on Crescenta Valley and Burroughs.

Tickets

Tickets for the Lompoc and Cabrillo CIF football games Friday go on sale tomorrow morning at the respective schools' activities offices. Office hours are 7:45 a.m. to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday.

Ticket prices, set by CIF, are: $2.50 for general admission and junior high students, and for high school students who purchase tickets at the gate; $1.50 for high school students pregame sale; $1 for students under 12.

Lompoc High reserved season ticket holders may claim their regular reserved seat by purchasing a general admission ticket and showing their reserve seat ticket at the game. Huyck Stadium gates will open at 6:45 p.m.; ticket booths will open at 7 p.m.

The ratings

The Lompoc Braves moved up one notch, to eighth place, in the season's final CIF Southern Section 3-A Prep Writers Poll.

The Braves increased their vote total from 47 last week to 62 this week and moved up as Montebello, rated fifth last week but a loser last Friday night, moved down into ninth place.

In the cross country ratings, Lompoc remains tied for 10th place with Corona del Mar, with Righetti having moved into ninth place.

In water polo, Cabrillo is rated 15th, while Lompoc is unranked.

Two Harvard gridders stabbed

BOSTON (UPI) — Two members of the Harvard University football team were stabbed early today in Boston's sleezy "Combat Zone" adult entertainment section.

One of the victims, Andrew Puopolo, 21, a starting player, "was brought back to life" at New England Medical Center. He had been stabbed in the heart following an incident with a prostitute. He was reported in critical condition.

The other player Thomas Lincoln, 23, was stabbed in the abdomen. He was reported in good condition at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Three men were arrested minutes after the 2:15 a.m. incident and were arraigned in Boston Municipal Court.

Two free agents set to sign

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two of baseball's more prominent free agents will sign contracts today in a culmination of 12 days of bargaining since the unprecedented re-entry draft, UPI has learned.

Jerry Kapstein, agent for 10 of the 22 free agents taken in the re-entry draft Nov. 4, said he reached final agreement on contracts for two players Monday night — the second and third to come to terms since the draft — with the second player's pact only hammered out in the early morning hours today.

"They were only resolved in the last 12 hours," Kapstein said in an early morning call. "I just finished the second one."

Bill Campbell, a 17-game winner as a relief pitcher with the Minnesota Twins this past season, was the first free agent to sign with another club. He agreed to terms with the Boston Red Sox.

Gabriel to start for Eagles

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Veteran Roman Gabriel will start at quarterback Sunday when the Philadelphia Eagles host the Oakland Raiders, Coach Dick Vermeil announced today.

Gabriel, who has not seen any action this season following his fifth knee operation last January, will replace Mike Boryla, who was sacked six times and threw four interceptions in a 24-3 loss to Cleveland last Sunday.

"We've decided to start Roman this week in the hopes we can take advantage of his experience," Vermeil said. "We haven't been as productive offensively as we would like to be. We hope Gabe's experience can make a contribution."

Cowboy win no easy task

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — In successive games the Dallas Cowboys have struggled to unimpressive wins over the New York Giants and Buffalo Bills and suddenly the NFC East's leading club is looking nothing like the potential Super Bowl challenger it believes itself to be.

But Cowboys Coach Tom Landry wishes to point out that no other team in the NFL has a better record than the one he runs.

"You may recall," Landry said following the Cowboys' 17-10 decision over Buffalo Monday night, "that last year when we did not play so good we lost some games."

The wins do continue to pile up for Dallas. There are now nine of them and that is more than the Cowboys have ever had at this stage of the season. Dallas also continues to own a one-game division edge over St. Louis.

Dallas' latest triumph came as a result of the Cowboys' aroused defense — which kept O.J. Simpson from breaking the long one — and the only good thing that happened to the offense all night, a series of Roger Staubach-to-Drew Pearson passes.

Staubach was forced to throw 34 times because Buffalo's eight-man front shut down Dallas' running attack and he could complete only 15 of those throws because of an almost constant blitz. But nine of the completions were to Pearson, totaling 135 yards.

Sports Q & A

Nod to Dorsett in trophy race

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
(N.E.A.)

The tipoff:

The multiplayer trade between the St. Louis Cardinals and the San Francisco Giants is just the first step to a transfusion of new blood into the Giants' organization by owner Bob Lurie, who's beginning to assert his authority. Next step is going to be a broom applied to the front office echelon.

Q. Once a quarterback is set under the center, can he keep calling signals as long as he wants without worrying about delay of game? Sometimes it seems like they're lined up for a minute before the play is run. — S.J., Covington, Ky.

A. NFL officials used to be a little lax in this area, giving the quarterback the benefit of the doubt when he was barking numbers. But there's now a 30-second clock in all stadiums, and it runs until the ball is snapped, making delay-of-game calls automatic.

Q. Who in your opinion is the better runner, Tony Dorsett of Pitt or Ricky Bell of Southern California? Which one is the favorite for the Heisman trophy? — M.N., Oil City, Pa.

A. It's a little like comparing oranges and grapefruit. Both are backs. Bell is a lot bigger and a better blocker. Dorsett is a shade more mobile. Because Dorsett has been doing his thing for four full seasons (this is only Bell's second year as a tailback) and has the attention of the influential press east of the Rockies, I fell the Pitt star is almost odds-on for the Heisman award.

Q. Penn State has had a long tradition of sending linebackers into the NFL. Can you tell me how many there are now in pro ball? Also something about the most recent one, Greg Buttle of the Jets. — J.D., Allentown, Pa.

A. There are currently seven Penn Staters on NFL linebacking units: Jack Ham of Pittsburgh, John Skorupan of Buffalo, Jim Laslavic and Ed O'Neil of Detroit, Chris Devlin of Cincinnati, Greg Buttle and John Ebersole of the New York Jets. Buttle was a third round draft choice, ironically faulted for his lack of speed, which turns out to be his forte. He is an intense kid from Linwood, N.J., whose father is an FBI agent. Greg says he'd be in the FBI, too, if he weren't playing football. His younger brother Toby is a defensive end at the Naval Academy. Buttle has been the one bright spot on the gloomy Jets this season.

Q. When are the big generals who run pro football going to realize that artificial grass is endangering the careers of their front line troops? — H.S., San Rafael, Calif.

A. The standard line has been to claim there are no facts and figures to prove that artificial turf causes more injuries than natural grass. But I've seen enough guys hit the concrete surfaces of places like Candlestick Park to realize there's got to be a change. Gale Sayers played his last game of football there. Jerry Levias was never the same after his knee landed on it. There'll be a reversion to natural grass systems as the artificial stuff starts to wear out.

Q. A question has me bugged about roughing the passer. I was always under the assumption that when the quarterback's arm is raised and going forward and the defensive man hits him, that's roughing the passer. Enlighten me please. — Howard Sweeney, Whitehall, Pa.

A. You're under the wrong impression. When the arm is going forward, the ball is generally still with the passer, and he's fair game for any defensive hit. The rules do say that no defensive player may run into the passer after the ball has left the latter's hand. However, there's a catch: the referee must determine whether the defensive player had a reasonable chance to stop his momentum while attacking the passer when he still had possession of the ball. That accounts for what looks like a late hit.

Q. Who's worth more money, Muhammad Ali or Arnold Palmer? — Robert Garcia, Oakland, Calif.

A. Not being privy to their bank statements or their income tax reports, I can only venture a guess. My pick for overall worth is Palmer because he has had steady big income from both golf and outside interests ever since he hit it big in the early '60s — and he doesn't have to support the same sizeable coterie that hangs around Ali to feed his ego and run his errands. Ali has made his in big chunks. He also has spent it in big chunks, which is why he has fought far past his prime as a boxer.

Parting shot:

The syntax was jumbled, but the description was graphically clear when young Brian Fairlie of New Zealand, watching John Newcombe labor through an early round tennis match, said, "He's a former shadow of himself." The personable Aussie no longer can move around the court with enough quickness to be a front line player. Only three years ago he dominated the world.

Clam season here

Inside tips on clamming: what, where, when, why & how

It's clamming time along the 1,100-mile California coastline. If you don't get your share, you have only yourself to blame.

Steamed littlenecks, fried razors, Pismo chowder—clams are a gourmet's delight.

The best clamming tides along the California coastline occur from November through February and from April through July.

Winter's low clamming tides occur during the afternoon and evening, and spring lows occur during the early morning. It makes a difference, when you stop to consider the legal hours for clamming are from one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset.

As a rule of thumb, the most successful clamming is during minus tides of -0.5 foot or lower. This is the time when untapped clam beds can be easily located by the digger.

The extent of digging and the location for clamming depends upon the clam you are after.

If you're looking for the ever-popular Pismo clam, you head for the long sandy strands. The Pismo beach area, Malibu and Huntington Beach are exceptional producers.

To take Pismos, you'll need a clamming fork (actually a potato fork), preferable with measuring device attached. They are available at many bait and tackle shops along the coast.

A measuring device is required. The size limit is five inches in greatest shell diameter north of the boundary between San Luis Obispo and Monterey counties, and four and one-half inches south of that boundary.

In all areas the limit is 10.

Littlenecks, chiones and cockles are found in bays, estuaries and smaller inlets along the entire coastline from San Diego to Humboldt Bay, and also off points along outer coastline where there is a good cobble area.

Among the other popular clams along the coast are the razor clam, found along the strands north of Humboldt Bay; and Washingtons and gapers, found in sandy and muddy areas such as Morro Bay. You'll generally have to dig down as much as three or four feet or more for Washingtons and gapers, but the effort is worth it.

Clamming is an exhilirating experience, but you should be prepared. You'll need:

1. A valid state fishing license if you're 16 or older.

2. An accurate measuring device.

3. Gloves, if you're after gapers or Washingtons.

4. A clamming fork, if you're after Pismos, and a shovel for Washingtons and gapers.

5. A copy of current California sport fishing regulations to keep you out of trouble.

6. Something warm to wear after clamming, especially dry socks.

7. A local tide book, usually available at no cost from local bait shops.

8. A good cookbook.

Some clamming advice on the subject:

—Don't use a galvanized bucket to hold clams. It can spoil your clams by electrolytic action.

—The best way to get the sand out of a clam is to keep it in salt water two or three days, changing the water several times. Don't keep your clams in fresh water, and if you don't intend to use them right away, freeze them after they are purged by salt water.

—Frozen clams will gape open when thawed, and the sand can easily be washed away.

Mussels are good, too, and many people never think of taking them. The annual quarantine on mussels ended Oct. 31. Mussels are usually found in solid rock areas, such as breakwaters and pier pilings along the entire California coastline. And note this, the limit is 25 pounds in the shell on sea mussel and bay mussel in combination.

Clams whether steamed, baked, deviled, roasted, served with linguini or chopped up for chowder, are considered highly by gourmets. They are high in vitamins and other nutritional assets, and lower in calories than many of the foods served on holiday menus.

Barnes may get jail sentence

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Pro basketball star Marvin Barnes may wind up in a Rhode Island jail if a judge finds the wayward forward violated probation in a 1972 assault case.

Superior Court Judge William M. Mackenzie signed an arrest warrant Monday sought by city police, who contend Barnes' Oct. 9 arrest on a gun charge was a probation violation.

The former American Basketball Association Rookie of the Year was charged with having an unloaded handgun in his luggage when it was checked at the Romulus, Mich., airport.

The court could order Barnes to serve a one-year prison term, which was suspended in an assault case two years ago. He faces criminal charges in connection with the Michigan case.

In May 1974, Barnes pleaded guilty to assaulting a former Providence College teammate with a tire iron in 1972. He was given a one-year suspended sentence and three years' probation.

Barnes, a Providence native, later contended he did not assault Lawrence Ketvirtis but felt the state had enough evidence to convict him.

In May 1975, a U.S. District Court jury in Providence ordered Barnes to pay Ketvirtis $10,000 for assault in a $1.5 million civil damages suit. Lawyers for both sides claimed the verdict was vindication for their clients.

After the verdict, the 6-foot-9 Barnes vowed to "play basketball, go on with my career and stay out of trouble."

Barnes' unpredictable career took another turn last week when the Detroit Pistons, who acquired him when the ABA and National Basketball Association merged, suspended him a third time this season for missing practice sessions.

Detroit paid $500,000 in the ABA dispersal draft for Barnes, who has not yet played for the team. He is nursing a strained Achilles tendon.

High price paid for star's mare

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Castle Hyde, an eight-year-old mare in foal to 1973 Triple Crown winner Secretariat, sold for $385,000 Monday night at the November Breeding Stock Sale at Keeneland Race Course to equal the second highest price ever paid for a broodmare here.

One share in Secretariat, consigned by E.V. Benjamin Jr., Big Sink Farm, was purchased at the sale by Aaron U. Jones, Eugene, Ore., for $280,000. Secretariat's shares, when first offered three years ago, sold for $190,000 each.

Jones recently acquired 1976 Kentucky Derby Winner Bold Forbes, which he plans to syndicate.

Consigned by John R. Gaines' Gainesway Farm, Lexington, and Swettenham Stud, England, Castle Hyde was purchased by Dogwood Farm, Inc., Atlanta. The top bidder for Dogwood Farm was Cothran "Cot" Campbell, Atlanta.

The price paid for Castle Hyde, by Tulyar out of Bold Irish, was only $10,000 under the record $395,000 paid for the broodmare Priceless Gem here in 1970.

Campbell said that he expected "six or seven" shares would be issued for the mare. As for her foal, Campbell added, "We might race it or we might sell it — I don't know yet."

At Monday's opening session, Fascinating Girl, a four-year-old filly consigned by Golden Eagle Farm, Ramona, Calif., brought $275,000. She was bought by Lee Eaton, Lexington, acting as an agent for an undisclosed buyer.

Big win for Canadiens

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Montreal Canadiens' 4-2 victory over St.Louis Monday gives the defending Stanley Cup champions 14 wins — and no other National Hockey League team can say as much.

The Canadiens also have 31 points, better than any of the other 17 teams. And they opened up an 11-point margin over the Los Angeles Kings in the NHL's Norris Division in the only league game of the night.

There were no games in the World Hockey Association.

"It was a big victory for us," claimed Canadiens' Coach Scotty Bowman. "We've been playing very well lately, but we only managed to tie our last two games before this one."

Doug Risebrough scored what proved to be the winning goal with just two minutes left in the second period as Montreal went ahead, 3-1. It was Risebrough's sixth goal of the season — four of them have been game winners.

"Sometimes statistics are deceiving," said Risebrough. "I may have four game-winning goals but you can't read too much into that, because when I score them we have a big lead, only the other team comes back to get more goals."

Steve Shutt's 19th goal of the season, an NHL high, on a rebound at 10:16 in the final period gave Montreal a 4-2 lead.

"I guess I'm back on the pace after being shut out in two games," said Shutt.

Carter's first appointee is 'good ole' Jody Powell

United Press International

Jody Powell is a "good ole' boy" in the best southern tradition, fun-loving, given to quips, at home spinning tales. His straight blond hair occasionally falls over his forehead and he walks with an easy, slightly bow-legged lope.

By Jimmy Carter's own words, Powell is the person closest to Carter outside the president-elect's own family. And Monday, Carter made Powell's selection as press secretary his first formal appointment.

During the heat of the campaign, Powell once quipped, "being called a liar by Lester Maddox (a former Georgia governor) is like being called ugly by a frog."

A few days ago, Powell joked to reporters that yes, Carter might appoint him White House press secretary "to punish me for the Playboy interview and all of you for a multitude of sins."

Powell is disorganized, infrequently returns telephone calls and doesn't yield responsibility easily to his subordinates. But he has strength that could make him the most powerful and influential press secretary ever to serve in the White House — an intimate relationship with Carter, Carter's "complete confidence" and other responsibilities going far beyond his duties with the news media.

"I wanted to get this announcement done early because I felt that if we delayed it further, it might take away from the importance of the appointment of secretary of state or secretary of defense," Carter himself quipped to reporters.

Powell, 33, grew up in Vienna, Ga., not far from Plains. His father, now dead, was a farmer, and his mother is a schoolteacher. Like his boss, Powell is a Baptist. Unlike his boss, Jody — no one calls him anything else — chain smokes and likes, as he refers to it, "a shooter" (a drink).

"He's always been backslid," laughs old classmate, Mrs. Bruce Edwards, wife of the pastor of Plains Baptist Church.

Powell was expelled from the Air Force Academy. "I cheated," Powell said. "There were no particular extenuating circumstances for it. I was aware of what I was doing at the time, it was the wrong thing to do. As a result I had to resign ... I hoped I learned something from it. Whether I did or not, it was a mistake, a serious one."

Powell said he told Carter about it when he went to work for him in the 1970 gubernatorial campaign. He said Carter replied: "Don't worry about it."

Powell took his B.A. degree at Georgia State in political science and completed almost all of his course work for a doctorate. After the campaign, during which he had driven for Carter, he became the governor's press secretary.

He says his lack of a professional journalistic background "is a bit of a handicap."

Powell acknowledges that he feels a loyalty to the man he works for in dealing with reporters. But he says that he would not lie or mislead.

"I think it ought always to be understood by everybody concerned that although my job is to serve the press, to act as an intermediary," Powell said in an interview, "... I do work for the candidate and that obviously, that allegiance to the candidate or public official should not allow me to lie or mislead or attempt to grant and withhold information based on who's treating us fairly and who's not."

Powell and his wife, Nan, an elementary school teacher in Atlanta and a Baptist choir singer, have one daughter, Emily, 9.

LOMPOC'S experimental bus system may be begging for riders, but not so with the Rio de Janeiro public transportation system. With inside space jammed, rush-hour commuters create extra space by hanging onto the outside of the rail car. It might be more comfortable than the crowded and stuffy conditions inside, but it does have its drawbacks, such as when the train reaches tunnels or walls with a narrow clearance.

Children of early heart victims in high risk area

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — In a new payoff from a 27-year study, researchers have found that children of fathers who had premature heart attacks are at greater risk of developing heart disease themselves.

Offspring of heart disease victims studied in Framingham, Mass., tended to have higher blood pressure, higher cholesterol levels in the blood and to be heavier than children of parents who did not have heart disease.

There also were more smokers among the offspring of heart attack victims than among those whose parents did not have the disease.

All those elements are considered contributing factors to heart disease, the nation's number one killer.

The results of the Framingham study were reported Monday at the opening session of the American Heart Association's 49th scientific meeting by Dr. Manning Feinleib, chief epidemiologist at the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute.

"We think we have a very useful educational message — that children of men who had heart attacks seem to be at increased risk and should be a primary target of prevention," Feinleib said.

Dr. William Kannel, medical director of the Framingham study, said in an interview that he believes both hereditary factors and environmental conditions are responsible for the findings.

"With the smoking, for example, it seems reasonable to me to explain the fact that the coronary parent's children smoke more on the fact that the parent smoked more and the children learned to smoke by observing their parents and peers," Kannel said.

"The fact that they are willing to do this despite the fact that they know their smoking parent had a coronary attack indicates how strong this social pressure to conform is. To me, the message is that parents should consider the effect of their smoking habit on their children."

The Framingham heart disease study began in 1949 when 1,105 couples who lived in the suburban community outside of Boston agreed to take part in a longterm study of heart disease risk factors. These people have been followed for more than 20 years.

The offspring study started in 1971. A total of 2,179 children of 845 couples were examined for possible heart disease risk factors and compared with their parents. Most of the offspring ranged in age 30 to 60. About 200 of their fathers had heart disease.

Nation's weather

United Press International

Light drizzle, moisture from dense fog and subfreezing temperatures teamed up to put an icy glaze on streets and highways in west Texas early today. Patchy, dense fog also shrouded parts of the Gulf and South Atlantic Coast states.

A few showers fell in central Florida late Monday night and rain, fog and some snow was scattered early today from parts of the Pacific Northwest into western Idaho.

Most of the rest of the nation had clear skies and dry weather.

Lawmen to study 55-mph limit

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Calling the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit a burden on police, an organization of police chiefs has commissioned a study to determine the speed limit's impact on law enforcement.

Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis, president of the Board of Officers of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, Monday said many police agencies believe effective enforcement of the limit was causing a diversion of valuable resources from the police officers' job.

Davis noted that the association as a whole has endorsed the limit but said "sufficient concern has been expressed to cause us to look further at this matter."

"What we have is a law that is unpopular with the people and the burden has fallen totally on police," Davis said. "We need to determine if there is a life-saving factor and if there is a fuel-conservation factor. If there is, then public education should be the order of the day."

Wilson E. Speir, association vice president and Texas director of public safety, said a 60 m.p.h. limit might be better for multilane highways and rural areas.

"I'm not for a return to a 70 m.p.h. limit," Speir said, "but I am of the opinion now that 60 is more realistic than 55 and that it would elicit a lot more voluntary compliance and respect for the law."

Speir said Texas troopers made more than 700,000 arrests this year because of the 55 m.p.h. limit.

Bail freedom for Patty doubtful

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst won't be immediately released from prison if bail is allowed by a federal judge because there is Los Angeles County "hold" warrant on her.

Miss Hearst, 22, still faces trial in Los Angeles on numerous charges resulting from an incident at an Inglewood sporting goods store in May 1974.

The Los Angeles County District Attorney's office said Monday that, if U.S. District Judge William H. Orrick Jr. allows her release from federal prison, she will have to post a $500,000 bail on the state charges before prison officials can release her.

Last week Orrick conducted a bail hearing for Miss Hearst, and he was expected to rule on the request this week. Defense attorneys asked for their client's release, pending the outcome of their appeal of her conviction on bank robbery charges.

Orrick asked the defense attorneys to draw up a plan which would insure Miss Hearst's safety if he orders her release. They will submit it to him early this week.

Miss Hearst, daughter of San Francisco Examiner President Randolph A. Hearst, was transferred early last week from the Federal Youth Center at Pleasanton across San Francisco Bay to the Federal Metropolitan Correctional Center in San Diego.

The Bureau of Prisons said the transfer was at Miss Hearst's request, but her lawyers said it was because she had been the target of threatening letters.

Miss Hearst was scheduled to be tried in Los Angeles on Jan. 25 on assault, kidnap and other charges.

Authorities said she helped Symbionese Liberation Army member William Harris escape after he was involved in a fracas in the sporting goods store.

Committee on assassinations reviews films of King and JFK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It was 6:01 p.m. when the sniper's bullet hit Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in the neck as he leaned over the second floor railing outside his room at the Lorraine Motel in Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1968.

Pictures taken moments later showed him sprawled on the balcony with friends and aides kneeling beside him.

Those and other pictures are being shown today to the House Select Committee on Assassinations, which held its first formal meeting Monday.

At the closed portion of the Monday session, 11 committee members silently watched a now-famous film clip taken in Dallas, 13 years ago next Monday, when President John F. Kennedy was shot and killed as his motorcade passed beneath the Texas Schoolbook Depository building.

One film strip has been interpreted by some as showing one or more people, possibly with rifles, standing on a grassy knoll overlooking the Kennedy motorcade at the time of the shooting.

But Rep. Thomas M. Downing, the committee chairman, told reporters later, "I didn't see any people on the hill."

The Warren Commission, which first investigated the Kennedy assassination, concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald was the sole assassin and it found no signs of a conspiracy involving others.

Then Attorney General Ramsey Clark, immediately after the King assassination and then after James Earl Ray was charged and sent into life imprisonment for the crime, asserted that there was no evidence of a "widespread plot ... there is no evidence that more were involved."

But through the years, persistent doubts have arisen on both the Kennedy and King murders as new reports come to light on what the FBI and CIA knew about Oswald and Ray and their motivation, and of a campaign by the FBI itself to besmirch King's character.

Only a few days before the panel met, the Washington Post said a memo has been found in which FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said a highly reliable source had informed him that Oswald told Cuban officials of his plans to kill the president.

Downing and Richard A. Sprague, the committee's chief counsel and staff director, said they had not seen the Hoover memo but had asked the Justice Department and intelligence agencies to provide all the documentation and evidence they had on the Kennedy and King killings.

Downing said that the committee was forming a task force of 170 persons to conduct its investigation.

"It sounds like a lot of people," he said, "but Congress mandated us to do a thorough job."

"YOUR REALTOR REPORTS"

GOOD NEWS TO VETERAN HOME BUYERS!

The Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 provides veterans with mortgage loans up to $25,000.00 under an F.H.A.-V.A. approved loan. (Federal Housing Administration-Veterans Administration). No down payment required to this figure of $25,000.00. However, as in most financing, a placement fee of 6-6½ points is required. (Expl., 1 point equals 1% 0r 6x25,000.00 equals $1,500.00).

Interest rates at this writing approximate 9½%. Term of mortgage pegged at 30 years. To qualify requires only 90 days of active duty. And this home purchase advantage is in addition to your regular V.A. benefits!

I feel we are as qualified as anyone in our area to arrange difficult financing. If you are anticipating a purchase or sale of real estate, why not avail yourself of our invaluable experience and financial connections? Drop in for a preliminary discussion to preclude a profitable real estate venture for you. We'd be only too happy to see you.

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF SANTA BARBARA
NO. 89780
NOTICE OF HEARING ON MOTION UNDER S6024(S) OF THE GOVERNMENT CODE TO MODIFY JUDGMENT TO SHOW CHANGE OF NAME.

In the Matter of the Petition of the Goleta Advisor to have the standing of a Newspaper of General Circulation Ascertained and Established.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that NEWRICK, INC., A California corporation, as owner of the newspaper, the Goleta Advisor, has filed in the above-entitled proceeding, its verified motion under S6024(2) of the Government Code to modify judgment to show change of name to the Goleta Today.

Petitioner alleges in substance that the subject newpaper, the Goleta Advisor, has changed and modified its name from the Goleta Advisor to the Goleta Today and that said modification of its name is made without any substantial change in its character or identity as a Newspaper of General Circulation, this motion to be based upon the Declaration of Robert I. Lauffer and all of the files, records and pleadings in the case.

NOTICE IS THEREFORE GIVEN that said petitioner will on Nov. 24, 1976, at the hour of 9:00 a.m., or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, apply to the above-entitled court at the Courthouse, 1100 Anacapa, in the City of Santa Barbara, County of Santa Barbara, State of California, for an order modifying said judgment to show the change of name of said newspaper as aforesaid.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
SOIL CONSERVATION SERVICE
SAN MIGUELITO SUBWATERSHED
SANTA YNEZ RIVER FLOOD PREVENTION PROJECT
CALIFORNIA

Notice of Environmental Assessment

Pursuant to Section 102(2)(C) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969; part 1500 of the Council on Environmental Quality Guidelines (38 FR 20550, August 1, 1973); and Part 650 of the Soil Conservation Service Guidelines (39 FR 19650, June 3, 1974); the Soil Conservation Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, gives notice that an environmental assessment is being prepared for the San Miguelito Subwatershed project near Lompoc in Santa Barbara County, California.

This project is being constructed under the authority of the Flood Control Act of 1944, Public Law 534 as amended.

The environmental assessment is being made for proposed channel improvements on San Miguelito Creek. The proposal involves increasing the flood water carrying capacity of the existing channel, constructed as an earlier phase of this project, by installing concrete channel lining from Central Avenue in the City of Lompoc southward and upstream to the Debris Basin, enlarging the Debris Basin, installing a concrete inlet channel from the Debris Basin upstream approximately 2,100 feet, and land treatment. If the assessment reveals a significant environmental impact, an environmental impact statement will be prepared. If the environmental impact is not significant, a negative declaration will be prepared.

Individuals can submit relevant information during the next 20 days to Gerald J. Czarniecki, District Conservationist, Soil Conservation Service, 705-A East Main Street, Santa Maria, California, 93454, or to Donald M. Hansen, District Conservationist, Soil Conservation Service, 152 E. Carrillo Street, Santa Barbara, California, 93102.

Preliminary environmental assessment data can be viewed at the two Soil Conservation Offices noted above.

TV Star Scene

Mac Davis has been given his second holiday special, "The Mac Davis Christmas Show," set for Dec. 15 on NBC. The theme of the show is to look at Christmas through the eyes of children. So, who do they get for guests? Some kids, right? Wrong. Try Richard Thomas and Raquel Welch.

John Davidson will also headline a yuletide special for NBC, "The John Davidson Christmas Show." Davidson's got some little people on his special anyway -- his two kids, his relatives and their kids, and the Lennon Sisters with their numerous offspring.

Speaking of children, in a rare television committment, Ingrid Bergman will take viewers into the world of "Childhood," a series of five one-hour dramas to be seen on PBS, beginning in January. Bergman will open each hour to provide a frame of reference for the plays, which were adapted from the work of five well-known writers: Rudyard Kipling, H.E. Bates, George Ewart Evans, Frank O'Connor and Barbara Waring. The series is intended primarily for adults, although each drama is told through the eyes of a child. So, don't dismiss it as merely a kid's show.

Michael Landon has been named National Easter Seal Chairman and will be the host of that organization's 1977 telethon in March . . . Frank Gifford who does the play-by-play on ABC's Monday Night Football and was one of the all-time greats of the New York Giants, has been named the recipient of the 1976 Gil Hodges Memorial Sports Award.

The voices of Debbie Reynolds, Paul Lynde, Henry Gibson and the late Agnes Moorhead will be heard when CBS airs "Charlotte's Web." E.B. White's timeless "story of miracles" will have its premiere run over two consecutive Fridays, bumping Spencer's Pilots, which has been shot down in flames, but is still waiting to hit the ground . . . Remember the Brady Bunch? Well you'll get to see the whole gang together again on Nov. 28 (7-8 p.m., EST) when ABC airs a special, "The Brady Bunch Variety Show." On subsequent Sundays in this time slot, formerly held by the now defunct Bill Cosby show COS, ABC will air "Journey Back to Oz," an animated show, and "The Young Pioneers Christmas," a sequel to last year's TV film starring Linda Purl and Roger Kern.

The old-line pros meet the newcomers, when Bob Hope and James Stewart join Henry Winkler and Ron Howard in "An All-Star Tribute to John Wayne," Nov. 26. One wonders what Howard and Winkler have to do with Wayne, other than the fact they're hot properties around ABC, which is airing this special. If Winkler doesn't watch it ABC is going to squeeze him dry. How much of a good thing can we, or he, stand.

Ricardo Montalban, Bill Bixby, Peter Lawford, Tina Sinatra and Sandra Dee are the costars of "Fantasy Island," an upcoming ABC flick . . . Andy Stevens, the son of actress Stella Stevens, steps into his mother's footsteps when he appears on a future episode of The Quest. John Ireland also appears in the episode about an aging gunfighter on the run from a bunch of young gunslingers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be industrious today unless you hook up with fun-loving friends. Then all your penchant for hard work will go by the boards.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you have anybody working for you today, keep a close eye on them. Otherwise you'll pay for work not performed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your search for a little romantic adventure could get you in trouble today. The bait may attract the wrong fish.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Confusion results for young people you are in charge of today because you are both too firm and too forgiving.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you have an issue you intend to clear up with someone in no uncertain terms, stick to your guns. Sugar-coating won't do it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Where you're clever moneywise in some respects, you'll be extravagant speculating for items you really don't need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be careful not to put yourself at a business disadvantage by diluting your position to give another an undeserved toehold.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't make requests of a friend today whose help is really not essential. Later, when you really need her, she may turn you down.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) High-stepping with free-spending pals today may give your budget a kick in the pants. You're the one who'll pay the piper.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep your guard up today, even if you feel the goal is in your grasp. If you let down, loose ends could come unraveled.

Opening lead — Q ♥

By Oswald & James Jacoby

South starts with seven top tricks as a starter for the nine he needs. He also can be sure of one extra club trick irrespective of where the queen is. That will give him eight. Where can he find a ninth?

Given time he can set up a diamond, but he isn't going to have time. The opponents have been unkind enough to attack in hearts.

Is there any other place to get another trick? Yes, there is. With a little luck he can score four club tricks.

One way to get four club tricks is to bang down his ace. If that drops a singleton queen he is home. Otherwise the lead of the ace will not give him a chance for more than three tricks in the suit.

However, there is a reasonable chance to score four club tricks if he leads toward his hand and finesses the 10. If the finesse works, he continues by playing his ace and will be home safely if East started with either queen and one or queen and two clubs. This represents a total probability of about 31 per cent.

Ask the Jacobys

A North Dakota reader wants to know if we ever open notrump with a singleton.

Never seldom applies in bridge, but this is one time that it does. We never open notrump with a singleton because such hands are so likely to play better in a suit than in notrump.

LOMPOC RECORD

OPINIONS

The Record's aim is to present facts in its news columns and opinions in its editorial columns.

To punish is not enough

It would seem reasonable, and many criminologists argue, that the fear of a stiff prison sentence would deter crimes serious enough to warrant such punitive action.

In fact, the argument over the use of executions for capital offenses has raged for years and no answers have been forthcoming, although a lot of studies have indicated fear of death is no deterrent. On the other hand, the Supreme Court recently said executions are constitutional, so legally, at least, it's O.K. to take an eye for an eye.

According to a 101-page study prepared under a Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grant and sponsored by the San Mateo County Bar Association, the harshness of a sentence has little significance in deterring a criminal from repeating a crime.

The study of burglars, robbers, and those sentenced for assault and petty theft found that about 60 per cent of convicted criminals return to a life of crime after serving their sentences, regardless of the length of the sentence; or that from 50 per cent to 90 per cent of the defendants repeated their crimes once released.

What's obvious about these statistics is that neither is the sentence a deterrent to the repeating of a crime nor is the threat of a severe sentence going to dissuade a person from doing whatever is his wont in the first place.

So, it would appear jails and prisons, at least in the U.S., are little more than holding tanks serving the purpose of temporarily preventing criminals from committing crimes without pause. Their sentence, then, provides the society with a brief respite from the criminal's pursuit of fun and profit. And a prison term might even be considered akin to a sort of welfare program, with the added incentives of room and board thrown in.

It is becoming increasingly doubtful that a change can be wrought in these statistics without some radical change in our society's methods of handling the aberrant behavior which makes a criminal of a person.

Society is the easiest scapegoat for criminal behavior in the first place, and is widely used for that purpose. And whether that is true or not, the mind set which would return a supposedly rehabilitated defendant to a life of crime must be better understood before any substantial progress is made in making our system of justice do that for which it was designed... deter as well as chastise.

Cast in bronze!

In regard to last week's Graphs column about Pierre Claeyssens' name being spelled wrong on the bronze plate commemorating the county's new Lompoc Administration Building, at Cypress Avenue and E Street, I received some interesting comments from Dorothy P. Schalck: "...I couldn't help sympathize with architect Pierre Claeyssens having his name spelled wrong and I don't see why the 'goof' shouldn't be corrected ... On anything so permanent as a bronze plaque the name should have been checked and double checked. This is just another example of the carelessness of people who should know better ... My name happens to be Schalck, you would be surprised how often it is spelled wrong ... It irks me no end, but I have found a way to call it to the attention of the careless people: If my name is spelled wrong, the next time I have a correspondence with that person, I leave out the second or sixth letters of their name and you would be surprised how fast the spelling of my name is corrected ... So I think Mr. Claeyssens is entitled to have his name spelled right on anything that is so prominently displayed and let the person that made the mistake pay for it and I'll bet he will be more careful in the future."

The misspelling of Claeyssens' name was noted in this space last Thursday, but the discovery really stemmed from research for a Graphs column of Nov. 2.

Now comes an addendum to the whole question. I was telling a school board trustee last week about the misspelling of Claeyssens' name and the trustee called my attention to an even greater blunder on the bronze plaque affixed to the wall of the school district's central administration building on North A Street. We were standing in the lobby of the building following a school board meeting. The trustee pointed to the plaque — a finely emblazoned plaque of the very best bronze — and said that it bore the name of Assistant Supt. Alice Milligan, along with the other appropriate names, when in fact it should have borne the name of former assistant Supt. Art Timmer. Timmer, who has departed the district for a superintendent's job elsewhere, was assistant to then Supt. Glenn Wegner, along with Mel Wilde. Timmer was in charge of curriculum and Wilde, business affairs of the district. Milligan, if my information is correct, wasn't an assistant superintendent, but was in charge of personnel and special affairs at the time the building was dedicated or occupied.

However, the goof if it is one, can be laid at the door of Claeyssens himself. Claeyssens provided the plaque, out of his own pocket as a gesture of friendliness toward the school board and administration. Now it remains to be seen, whether, 1) the plaque's wording with Milligan's name included may perhaps have been accurate at the time the plaque was enscribed; and-or, 2) the legend may or may not have been given to Claeyssens by the district administration. If the latter is the way it was, Claeyssens can be forgiven. By the same token, however, someone in the administration, cannot be forgiven.

The facts of this new case could not be checked out adequately Monday as this was being written. That's the way things stand now.

Claeyssens, it should be noted, was the designer of both administration buildings.

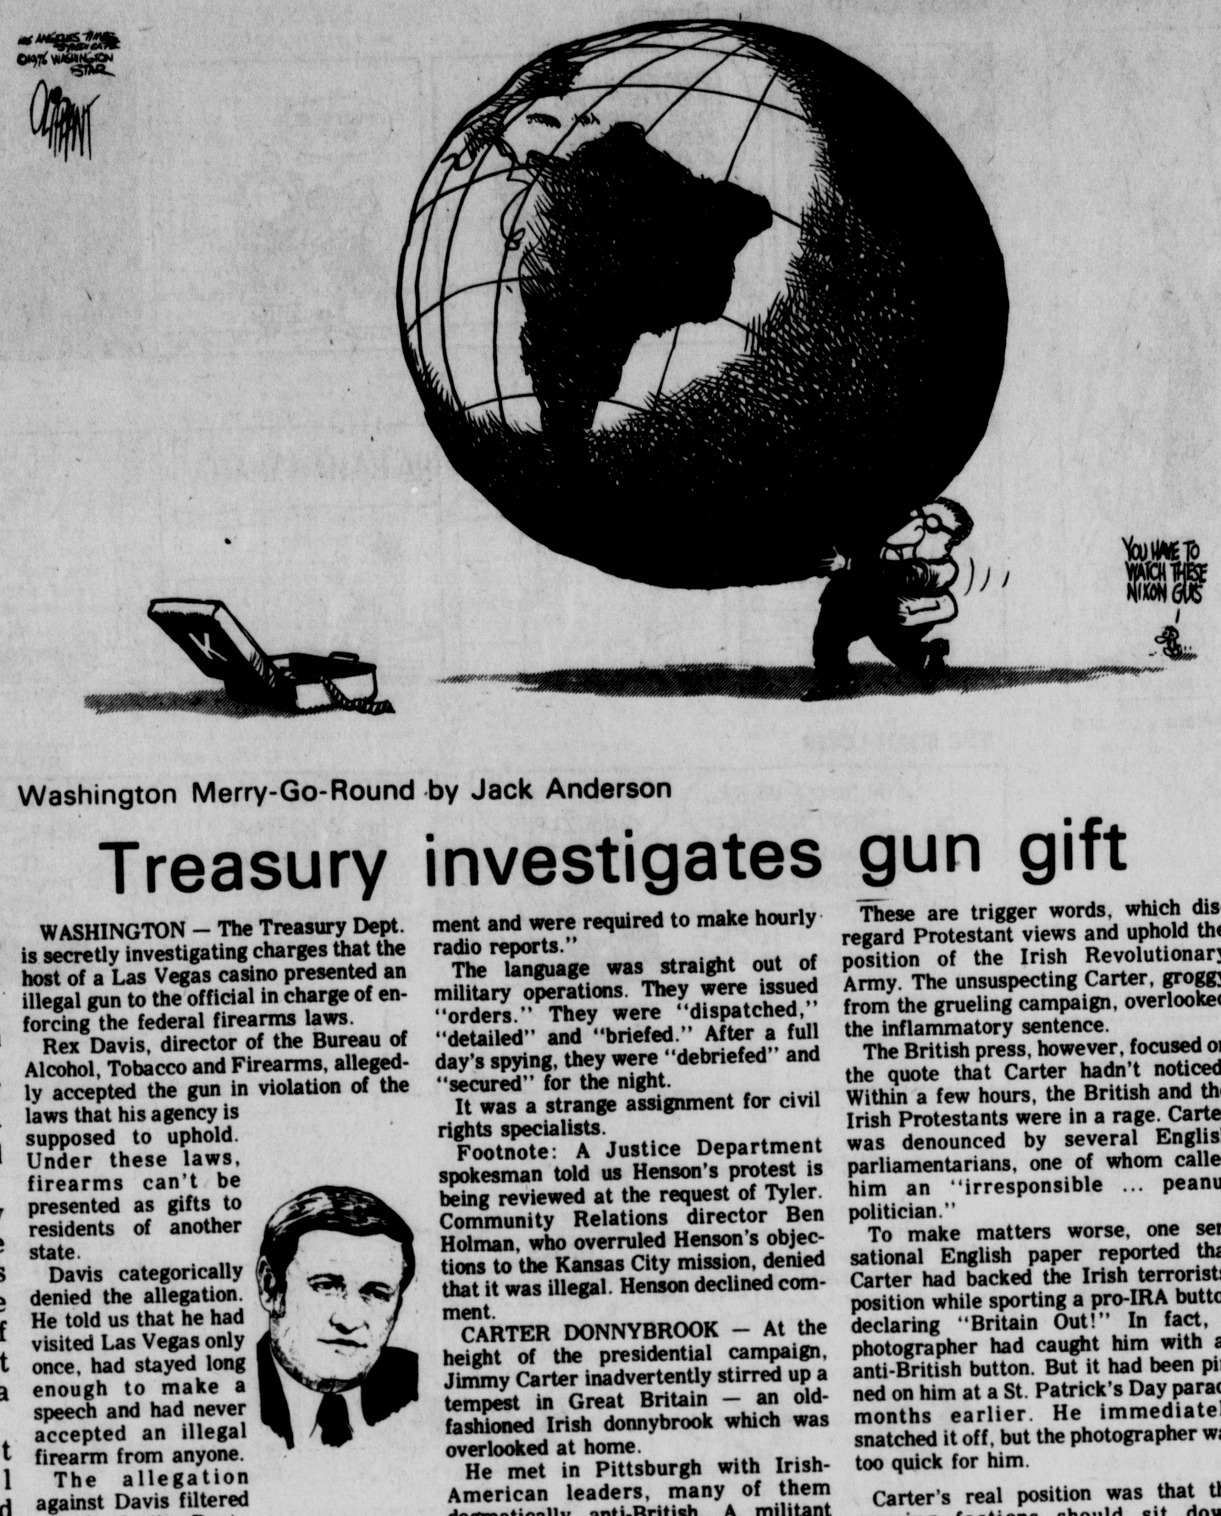
In another reflection on these affairs, I got a call from another reader wanting to know why the bronze plaque commemorating the Lompoc Police Department on South D Street, was removed to make way for a pay telephone. Readers may recall that the plaque was temporarily lost after it was removed from the outside wall of the builing. That's a good question and one for which I have no answer.

Two officials of a governmental agency appeared at the front desk the other day, seeking confirmation of a story about a man reportedly talking to a rabbit. The man in question was being screened for employment and there was some concern that the act of talking to rabbits might reflect adversely on that individual's capacity to hold a specific job.

No one hereabouts was able to confirm that such a story had run in the Record and that's where the matter ended. I hope the guy got the job, because the unemployment picture is bad enough.

Remember, the story about the upcoming improvement of Ocean Avenue and Highway 246 from Seventh Street to Grefco Co., and the southerly turn of Highway 1?

A state department of transportation official told an audience in Lompoc recently that the project would go to bid in January. Now it seems the project has slipped in the priority sweepstakes and the earliest it could now go to bid would be in April. All this is tentative, but a department official is rounding up the details of just what happened.



Washington Merry-Go-Round by Jack Anderson

Treasury investigates gun gift

WASHINGTON — The Treasury Dept. is secretly investigating charges that the host of a Las Vegas casino presented an illegal gun to the official in charge of enforcing the federal firearms laws.

Rex Davis, director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, allegedly accepted the gun in violation of the laws that his agency is supposed to uphold. Under these laws, firearms can't be presented as gifts to residents of another state.

Davis categorically denied the allegation. He told us that he had visited Las Vegas only once, had stayed long enough to make a speech and had never accepted an illegal firearm from anyone.

The allegation against Davis filtered out of a Justice Dept., investigation of Charles Baron, the "greeter" at the fashionable Riviera Hotel on Las Vegas' strip.

Baron is a retired brigadier general, who has lived in Las Vegas for 20 years. He is known to be an avid gun collector. Reports reached Washington that he was passing out weapons to visiting celebrities.

One of Davis' own agents overheard a conversation indicating that a high A.T.F. official, possibly Davis himself, had accepted a gun from Baron. The investigation eventually focused on Davis. Treasury officials told us that internal investigations usually are made into any charges of impropriety against Treasury officials. A spokesman said the preliminary investigation has produced no evidence that Davis took the illegal gift.

Footnote: Baron did not return our repeated calls.

SECRET SURVEILLANCE — In a memo intended for the eyes only of Deputy Attorney General Harold Tyler, a Justice Dept. official has charged that the department conducted "improper and perhaps illegal" surveillance at the Republican convention last August.

The official, Lee Henson, reported that an 11-man team was assembled in Kansas City to keep close watch on "yippies, gays and other persons and groups." The "spies" were drawn from the Justice Department's Community Relations Service, which is supposed to resolve civil rights disputes.

In Henson's opinion, the spying was "improper and unlawful" because it was "unrelated to discriminatory practices." He contended that the Community Relations Service has "no surveillance or intelligence-gathering authority."

Nevertheless, the 11 civil rights officials were ordered into action, with all the drama of an undercover mission. They carried "walkie-talkie radio equipment and were required to make hourly radio reports."

The language was straight out of military operations. They were issued "orders." They were "dispatched," "detailed" and "briefed." After a full day's spying, they were "debriefed" and "secured" for the night.

It was a strange assignment for civil rights specialists.

Footnote: A Justice Department spokesman told us Henson's protest is being reviewed at the request of Tyler. Community Relations director Ben Holman, who overruled Henson's objections to the Kansas City mission, denied that it was illegal. Henson declined comment.

CARTER DONNYBROOK — At the height of the presidential campaign, Jimmy Carter inadvertently stirred up a tempest in Great Britain — an old-fashioned Irish donnybrook which was overlooked at home.

He met in Pittsburgh with Irish-American leaders, many of them dogmatically anti-British. A militant priest read Carter what purported to be a copy of the Democratic platform on Ireland and asked whether he supported it.

The platform was carefully calculated to offend neither side. But the priest spiked the noncontroversial platitudes with some language of his own. Between two innocuous sentences, he inserted the words: "The U.S. should encourage the formation of (a) united Ireland."

These are trigger words, which disregard Protestant views and uphold the position of the Irish Revolutionary Army. The unsuspecting Carter, groggy from the grueling campaign, overlooked the inflammatory sentence.

The British press, however, focused on the quote that Carter hadn't noticed. Within a few hours, the British and the Irish Protestants were in a rage. Carter was denounced by several English parliamentarians, one of whom called him an "irresponsible ... peanut politician."

To make matters worse, one sensational English paper reported that Carter had backed the Irish terrorists' position while sporting a pro-IRA button declaring "Britain Out!" In fact, a photographer had caught him with an anti-British button. But it had been pinned on him at a St. Patrick's Day parade months earlier. He immediately snatched it off, but the photographer was too quick for him.

Carter's real position was that the warring factions should sit down together and talk peacefully. He sent a telegram to the Irish Prime Minister, explaining his views. Such responsible papers as the London Times also tried to set the record straight.

But the damage had been done. Our European sources tell us that the denial has never caught up with the original story. Only in the United States has the story gone mostly untold.

ROVin' Around with R.O.V.

You can't have a fit!

U.S. Senator Barry Goldwater, when he spoke at the rollout program for Space Shuttle Orbiter 101 in Palmdale a couple of months ago, commented that when Alan Shepard became the first American to blast into space on May 5, 1961, no one dreamed that within 15 years the word "routine" would ever be applied to space travel.

Yet, he added, the Shuttle Orbiter will make all of this possible, providing almost ho-hum access to space.

Personally, I consider the subject to be still in the gee-whiz stage, but as we move closer to something like once-a-week service to outer space being launched right from our doorstep at Vandenberg Air Force Base, perhaps the time will come when it stops seeming like something out of Buck Rogers.

One of the changes that the Space Shuttle program will bring about is the discontinuing of custom tailoring of space gear for those traveling aboard the Orbiter.

In the past, astronauts have had their space attire cut to fit their personal measurements. The new procedure will run something along the line of what the Army practiced when I was first inducted into the service. Space suits will run small, medium and large for men and women alike.

Space engineers have come up with an "adjustable fit" concept for the new space suit and rescue system being developed for the Shuttle program. The increasing frequency of space flights and the many different crewmen, astronauts and scientists who will be aboard the Orbiter vehicles will make it impossible for each to have his or her own suit.

The new suits will be two-piece outfits with a body seal closure at the waist. This will eliminate the need for pressure-sealing zippers used in the Apollo and Skylab suits, according to NASA.

The new rescue system is called the Personal Rescue Enclosure, a 34-inch diameter ball which has three layers consisting of Urethane, Kevlar and an outside protective covering made of Lexan with a small viewing port.

Another feature of the Shuttle suit is the built-in portable life support system. When Apollo astronauts walked on the moon they had to remove a bulky 75-pound life-support system from its storage location aboard the spacecraft and then connect it to the space suit. The Shuttle suit has a life support system that is an integral part of the rigid upper torso.

Use of the Kevlar fabric has made it possible for elbow, wrist, knee and other joints to be fabricated from the flat fabric rather than following the Apollo and Skylab pattern where joints were constructed of molded neoprene rubber. The new system provides better mobility and also reduces the cost and weight of each suit.

The rescue ball is designed for persons in disabled spacecraft to crawl inside and then to be transported to another vehicle. The exact manner of transport is still being studied. One plan is for an astronaut in a space suit to carry the rescue unit, much like a suitcase; a second mode is to hook up a clothesline-like device between the two spaceships and pass the rescue ball and its passenger from the disabled craft to the rescue ship; and the third mode is to use the remote manipulator arm of the cargo bay of the Orbiter to pluck the rescue ball and the passenger from the disabled craft.

Gee whiz! (Or did I say that before?)

Berry's World

Washington calling by Marquis Childs

No novices needed in State Dept.

WASHINGTON — Of all the frowsy rhetoric spilled out in the late campaign it would be hard to pinpoint any calculated to do more harm than the rodomontade about the Panama Canal Zone and American rights there.

It was initiated by Ronald Reagan in his primary flourish in Florida when he had begun to push President Ford even further to the right than his natural instincts and every act of his career dictated.

Reagan was denouncing the negotiations with the government of Panama which would lead to the ultimate surrender by the United States of sovereignty over the zone. That would not, of course, mean surrendering control and operation of the Canal itself.

This had an immediate jingoistic appeal. President Ford was cowed. When he spoke about Panama it sounded very much like a feeble echo of Reagan. And that was in spite of the fact that his Secretary of State, Henry Kissinger, had opened negotiations with Panama two years before and those negotiations were being carried out in meticulous detail by one of our ablest diplomats, Ellsworth Bunker.

So put that fusillade down to campaign rhetoric. Then comes Jimmy Carter in the second debate dealing with foreign policy. Asked about Panama he replied:

"I would never give up complete control or practical control of the Panama Canal Zone. But I would continue to negotiate with the Panamanians."

That is a contradiction in terms, since the negotiations are, as Kissinger initially agreed, about giving up sovereignty, a continuing source of hostility among the Panamanians. Carter was apparently unaware that the Democratic platform took a much more reasonable tone with a pledge to "recognize principles already agreed upon."

These were assumed to be the eight principles Kissinger had worked out with the then Panamanian foreign minister, Juan Antonio Tack. One more illustration of Kissinger's skill, it was a recognition that the hostility between the Panamanians and the Zonians was bound to break out in violence if it was not remedied.

That is what the President-elect now confronts. Four explosions have already occurred. One blew up the car of William Drummond, legislative chairman of the Canal Zone Central Labor Union and president of local 1798 of the Federation of Government Employees. The other three did minor damage to U.S. installations.

But they are symptomatic of the kind of trouble that can grow — and if it continues, the hope of any reasonable settlement will be out.

What next, then? Send in the Marines to keep order?

That is a prescription that simply will not work. Throughout Latin America the U.S. role in Panama is being closely watched with the widespread feeling that the privileges of another age will not go down today.

It should not be hard for Carter to ignore the words he spoke in the heat of his exchange with the president. He will have a chance in the interregnum to insure that the negotiations with Panama continue.

While the Panama affair may seem of minor importance, it shows with painful clarity Carter's lack of experience. In at least a dozen different directions he has a learning process ahead of a formidable nature.

When the few men close to him have been asked about top appointments — Cyrus Vance as Secretary of State, for example — they have received the same reply: You will not find any of these well-known names in a Carter administration. We intend to pick new people.

This is one reason for the disquiet over Carter's intentions. While he need not name any of the familiar figures often mentioned, it seems to me he would perform a service to the public and to himself if he would call on the wisdom of men and women with long experience in government and foreign policy.

These would be men past the age when they might be willing to take high public office with all the stern demands that go with it.

He has one such counselor in W. Averell Harriman who at 84 has had the widest range of experience at home and abroad. The list should include Republicans as well as Democrats, corporation heads, labor leaders, the whole gamut of knowledge and expertise that have made this country great.

It would be a recognition on Carter's part that his narrow win was a challenge to meet the crisis he so often referred to in his campaign and not an invitation to hand out political plums to the various segments that put together his victory.

The time is all too short. The creative action must come quickly if he is to lead the nation out of the mire of unemployment and growing criminality.
